

Moynihan nearly quits U.N.; Ford intercedes

By JOSEPH EGELHOF
Knight News Service

NEW YORK—Angered by criticism from foes inside the State Department and a British-led move to change his outspoken style, Daniel P. Moynihan came within minutes of quitting as chief American delegate to the United Nations Friday but reportedly was talked out of it by President Ford.

The sudden fracas was screened by evasive words, but it raised the question of whether not only Moynihan's undiplomatic ways but also the United States policy of bluntly confronting its opponents at the U.N. was being reassessed.

A White House spokesman, stating that Moynihan had not resigned, added that "the President has full confidence in Ambassador Moynihan and he fully approves what he is doing at the U.N."

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's attitude remained uncertain. Sources in Washington said the policy Moynihan has been carrying out has been Kissinger's own, but that the secretary must be paying attention to criticism of Moynihan within his department.

Within the State Department, the former Harvard professor is regarded by some as uncontrollable. He is a Democrat said to aspire to run against Sen. James Buckley, R-Con. of New York.

The dispute came to a head Monday when Ivor Richard, chief delegate of Britain, addressed the board of directors of the United Nations Association, saying he himself spent his time "preventing rows at the United Nations, not looking for them." He didn't name Moynihan, but his target became clear in the next sentence:

"Whatever else the place is, it is not the O.K. Corral, and I am hardly Wyatt Earp."

The attack was said to stem from the Britain's fear that Moynihan was weakening the U.N.

Moynihan quipped after the speech, "Wyatt Earp didn't do so badly."

Friday morning the U.S. mission called an "important" press conference for Moynihan for 12:30 p.m. On time, the assembled correspondents heard Moynihan's press officer announce that Moynihan was canceling the conference. The press aide declined to say what the conference had been called for or why it was canceled.

But he said Moynihan had instructed him, in case anyone asked about rumors he was resigning, to say: "Everyone leaves eventually but I have no statement to make today."

Moynihan was found at the Delegates Bar on the same floor of the U.N. a couple of minutes later.

L.B.-L.A. transit link wins approval

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

The first segment of a proposed Los Angeles County rapid-transit system to be built will be a line from Long Beach to Union Station in downtown Los Angeles, according to an agreement reached Friday at a "transit summit" meeting in Los Angeles.

Mayor Thomas J. Clark, who represented Long Beach at the meeting, said it was also agreed that the "starter line" of the system will run from Long Beach to Canoga Park.

The agreement, which must be ratified by the respective governing bodies, was approved by Clark, Supervisors James Hayes and Baxter Ward of Los Angeles County, Los Angeles Mayor Thomas Bradley and Los Angeles Councilman John Ferraro, chairman of its ad hoc committee on rapid transit.

It will be submitted Tuesday to the Long Beach City Council, Clark said.

"This will insure our Transportation Center and will give us transit service to and from Long Beach," the mayor said. "It's a real boost for the city."

Art Chapman, transportation coordinator for the city, said that if all governmental bodies approve the agreement, construction on the Long Beach-Union Station line could begin in 1977, and be completed in 1983.

The 25.7-mile line would be above ground as far as the Los Angeles Coliseum, and then would go underground to Union Station. The state report estimated the cost at $850 million.

Some weeks ago, Clark, on behalf of

No more murder plots

Ford plan would curb CIA

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — The White House, in its first reaction to the Senate Intelligence Committee assassination report which President Ford tried to suppress, said Friday that the chief executive is working on a plan to prevent any CIA murder attempts in the future.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen, who said Ford was not going to judge past activities, declined to discuss the plan. But Ford is expected to adopt many recommendations made by the Rockefeller Commission last June.

Ford has already moved to implement one commission recommendation — that the CIA director be chosen from outside the agency. He has nominated

George Bush, U.S. envoy to China, to replace William Colby, a career spy.

Nessen said Ford "absolutely abhors government officials being involved in those kinds of things."

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, visiting Capitol Hill to testify behind closed doors about CIA covert operations, insisted that he was "positive" U.S. assassination plotting can be stopped.

The committee report said that the CIA tried to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and the late Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba, as well as supporting coups against several other foreign leaders.

Kissinger said there should be tighter congressional control over intelligence operations but rejected the suggestion that covert operations be taken from the CIA and given to some other agency.

But Kissinger refused to discuss his own role in the Nixon administration program to stop Marxist Salvadore Allende from becoming Chilean president in 1970. Although he has testified in secret sessions of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Kissinger said that "I do not believe a secretary of state should testify in public about covert operations."

Kissinger has told the committee that he rejected a CIA plan to organize a Chilean coup. Richard Nixon, interviewed in the latest issue of Ladies Home Journal also insisted: "We had nothing to do with Chile or Allende."

But CIA officials have testified that Nixon and

Kissinger were putting heavy pressure on them to overthrow Allende. Gen. Rene Schneider, Chilean army chief of staff, who objected to a military coup, was killed in a bungled kidnap attempt, but the Senate report said there was no indication U.S. officials ordered Schneider's murder.

Nessen said there is nothing in the report that suggests that Ford fire Kissinger or former CIA Director Richard Helms, now U.S. ambassador to Iran.

Sen. Frank Church said Friday he believed the Senate would support legislation for strong Congressional oversight of the intelligence agencies and would take action "before Easter."

In a telephone interview with the New York Times

Service, the chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence said he based this assessment on the manner in which his colleagues received the committee report on assassination plots against foreign leaders at a closed session of the Senate Thursday.

"The mood was toward the affirmative," he said, in support of the need to correct abuses outlined in the 347-page report. The intelligence committee found that U.S. officials had "instigated" plots to kill two foreign leaders and had supported or known about coup d'etats that resulted in the deaths of three others. It found no evidence, however, that the Central Intelligence Agency had carried out any assassinations.

'Cal., how sweet it is,' Reagan tells greeters

By BOB HOUSER &
GIL BAILEY
Staff Writers

Ronald Reagan closed his two-day presidential announcement tour Friday at Hollywood-Burbank Airport with a slightly hoarse but euphoric sigh, "Home in California! How sweet it is!"

Some 500 sign-bearing partisans cheered Reagan and his wife, Nancy, as they deplaned from a Northwest Orient 727 jet shortly after 4 p.m. to mark the end of the five-state mission of announcing his candidacy to oppose President Ford for the Republican nomination.

Noting friendly and familiar faces in the crowd, Reagan said the task doesn't look as big as it did a few hours earlier as he flew across the country.

At a news conference after the airport reception, Reagan revealed an apparent source of his confidence in undertaking the presidential run — "his success with California voters."

Queried about liberal Sen. Charles Percy's assessment that Reagan has a "narrow constituency" and that his candidacy would be a "disaster" to the party, Reagan said he considers California to be "a clear microcosm of the United States."

He pointed to his two terms as governor even though the GOP was outnumbered three to two. "If that's narrow, California is different from what I think it is."

Reagan said he was "at a loss" about the disaster reference because, he said, Percy had a letter hand-delivered to Reagan, accepting the candidacy in good faith and "what seemed to be good will."

He disclosed that Ford assured him of his own intentions to conduct a nonpersonal campaign when Reagan called the President Thursday to advise him of his decision to run.

Reagan referred to California again when a newsman asked the basis of his estimate that he would have broad appeal across the country. He said he had been well-received in "some 30-odd states before a great variety of audiences and I don't think we're all that different in California."

He promised to take California's GOP 11th commandment into other states as he campaigns, not "speaking ill of another Republican."

He said he would do "nothing to divide or weaken the party or to lend comfort and aid to Democratic opponents in the election to come. And I make this promise to myself — not to weaken or water down my beliefs for any supposed political advantage. I will say what I think and believe."

Asked his reaction to the toy pistol incident in Miami Thursday in which 20-year-old Michael Carvin pointed the gun at Reagan, was immediately seized by Secret Service agents and later arraigned on charges of intimidating a presidential candidate and assaulting a federal officer, Reagan said his reaction was one of "great

FBI pushed sex controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI tried to stir up a controversy over free love at the University of Texas as part of the bureau's counterintelligence program against the New Left, according to Senate Intelligence Committee documents.

In an August 1968 memo to his agent in charge at San Antonio, the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover approved a proposal to forge an anonymous letter from a purportedly irate parent protesting an allegedly lax attitude by the university toward sexual permissiveness.

ENCLOSED with the letter would be a clipping of a news story that appeared in the San Antonio Light with the headline "Free Love Comes to Surface Around UT-Austin."

The letter was to be sent to Texas state Sen. Wayne Connally, brother of then-Gov. John Connally, and to Frank Erwin, chairman of the university's board of regents.

The anonymous parent, "who was considering sending his son or daughter to the university ... could protest such activity at a state-supported university," according to the proposal made by the San Antonio agent.

In approving the proposal, Hoover said that "such a communication may be of value in forcing the university to take action against those administrators who are permitting an atmosphere to build up on campus that will be a fertile field for the New Left."

The documents released by the committee Thursday did not disclose whether the anonymous letter ever was sent or what effect it had on university administrators.

"IF WE CAN 'nip this in the bud' it could prevent the development of another New Left such as that at Columbia University," Hoover said.

N.Y. tax-hike vote put off; U.S. aid bid stalls

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Legislature put off action on $200 million in New York City tax increases for the third straight day Friday, further delaying a move which is designed to win federal help to avoid the city's default.

The Legislature, having broken a two-day partisan deadlock on the tax increases, had been expected to act on the measures late Friday night or early this morning.

But legislative leaders decided to send their members home and have them come back this morning to consider the tax increases, which will hit personal income, estates, banks, cigarettes, haircuts, beauty parlors, massage parlors and weight-reducing salons.

The leaders said earlier they had enough votes to pass the taxes bills, but they decided about 11 p.m. to put off action instead of waiting for the New York City Council to pass resolutions asking for the tax hikes.

A spokesman for Gov. Hugh Carey said the Legislature also would get a bill that, in effect, cuts the pay of city employees by $42 million over the first six months of 1976 by forcing them to pick up what the city has been contributing to their pension fund.

State officials meanwhile, remained optimistic that a $150 million financial arrangement would be completed to help the city avert default next week.

"There doesn't seem to be any problem on the $150 million," said a spokesman for the Municipal Assistance Corp., a state agency set up to aid the city which borrows on behalf of the city.

State officials have said the money will come from various state funds to keep the city from defaulting until Dec. 11 — enough time for Congress and President Ford to agree on some form of measure to keep the city from default, according to Carey.

Carey has been pressing for quick action in the Legislature on the tax package as it is seen as the key to obtaining federal aid or loan guarantees for the city.

New York City sources said the tax package included:

—A graduated increase in New York City residents' income tax to produce $75 million.

—A 50 per cent surcharge on the state's estate tax, for $35 million.

—A bank tax increase that would yield $30 million.

—A minimum charge for personal and corporate income to raise $15 million.

—A $10 increase in the $15 auto use tax, to yield $15 million.

—Raising the tax on low-tar cigarettes from four cents to eight cents a pack to bring in $15 million. The tax on high-tar cigarettes is already eight cents.

—Extension of the city's four per cent sales tax to barber shops and beauty and massage parlors, raising $15 million.

U.S. waterways seen in mortal danger

New York Times Service

CHICAGO — Asserting that America's rivers and lakes were "in mortal danger," Assistant Secretary of the Interior Nathaniel Reed said Friday the federal government should impose a near-total ban on the toxic group of chemicals known as PCBs. He excepted only those destined for use in transformers and capacitors.

Even the use of PCBs in such equipment — regarded as relatively safe by the manufacturers but not by environmental scientists — must be "immediately and critically reviewed," Reed said, adding that all substitutes be evaluated so that PCBs can be completely eliminated from industrial use.

Reed delivered his speech on the third and final day of a conference on polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, and it was by far the strongest statement against their continued use by a major government official.

PCBs have been used in manufacturing processes since 1930 but they were not detected as ubiquitous toxic elements in the environment until 1968. For many years, they were confused with DDT, with which they have a similar chemical structure.

Reed said he was "deeply shocked by the pervasiveness of PCBs; they are literally everywhere." He said he was "very troubled by the exceedingly high levels found in fish from all our drainage systems." He emphasized he did not mean just the Hudson River and the Great Lakes — which have serious and widely publicized PCB problems — but countless waterways in all parts of the country.

He said that PCBs posed an immediate threat to efforts to preserve and protect endangered species of fish and mammals. "Under present conditions," he warned, "PCBs may very well pull the rug out from beneath us by destroying marginal species in spite of our best efforts for preservation."

Reed said the Environmental Protection Agency, which sponsored the conference, had the responsibility for limiting or banning PCBs in the environment.

EPA Administrator Russell Train, who opened the meeting on Wednesday, said he thought the way to control PCBs was for Congress to quickly enact a toxic substance control act which has been pending for several years. Train also said he was reluctant to order any individual industries from dumping PCBs into the environment by using Section 504 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Amendments Act of 1972 because "there is a question as to whether it would hold up in court."

PCBs have caused liver cancer and reproductive failures in laboratory animals and some of the General Electric workers using the chemicals in New York State have complained of allergic dermatitis, nausea, dizziness, eye and nasal irritation, asthmatic bronchitis and fungus infections.

60 vehicles pile up in fog

Combined News Services

TAMPA, Fla. — About 60 vehicles piled up along a 20-mile, fog-shrouded stretch of Interstate 4 when visibility dropped to zero during the Friday morning rush hour. The fiery crash hospitalized eight and closed the superhighway for 2½ hours. Nearly two years ago, a 55-car pileup in the same general area, also in thick fog, claimed one life. "I'll never forget that noise as long as I live," said Mary Stephenson, a nursing student, as wreckers pried apart the mangled steel. "We heard everything screeching, and it just went on and on."

Viet MIA talks

WASHINGTON — Members of the House special committee on missing in action will confer Monday in Paris with representatives of the two Vietnamese governments, Chairman G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss., said Friday. Montgomery described the meetings as informal, unofficial and preliminary. He said in a statement he hopes the meeting "will lead to official talks between our select committee and the top officials of North and South Vietnam in the future."

HEW chiefs resign

WASHINGTON — Two more top welfare administrators in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare have submitted their resignations, it was learned Friday. The resignations of John Svahn and John Young in HEW's Social and Rehabilitation Service represent almost the last of the Nixon administration carryovers in the department. Earlier this fall, U.S. Welfare Commissioner Robert Carleson and his deputy also resigned from HEW.

Fierce new battle in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Fierce street fighting with rockets and heavy machine guns exploded Friday night across most of Beirut, pushing Lebanon toward another round of bloody civil war. Clashes between Moslem and Christian gunmen were the most intense since a battle for the capital's luxury hotels three weeks ago. They left a fragile cease-fire in shambles. The fighting engulfed Beirut's eastern residential sections and also reached into the Martyrs Square commercial area and close to a Palestinian refugee camp on the eastern outskirts. At least 18 persons were killed and 100 kidnapped. Tough fighting also broke out between Moslem and Christian armies in the northern city of Tripoli, scene of bloody clashes this spring.

Laos shortages

VIENTIANE, Laos — Gasoline stations shut down Friday and Vientiane residents prepared to get around on foot or bicycles following the closing of the frontier during this week's fighting between Thailand and Laos. Shortages of vegetables and other food items were also anticipated, but a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Laos had "other friends and other ways of coping with the situation." The statement apparently referred to anticipated aid from North Vietnam or possibly from the Soviet Union. Soviet aid and technical personnel have been arriving in Laos in greater numbers since the Communist-led Pathet Lao gained control of the country last May. The landlocked country has relied on Thailand for most of its petroleum products or on Thai permission for the products to pass through Thai territory.

Busing ban opposed

WASHINGTON — The 17-member congressional Black Caucus said Friday it is unalterably opposed to a constitutional amendment that would ban the busing of school children. In a policy statement, the caucus said the Constitution has remained a viable document because it has "transcended short-sighted political interests" and addressed the basic principles underlying our democratic system. On Wednesday, the Democratic Caucus killed a move to force Judiciary Committee Democrats to bring an antibusing amendment to the House floor within 30 days. The overwhelming vote against the amendment assured busing proponents that such a move could not succeed during this Congress.

Chrysler rebate

DETROIT — In a new effort to stimulate sales, Chrysler Corp. said Friday it will offer a $200 or $300 rebate to any of its 193,000 employees or retirees who purchase a new 1976-model car or truck. It is the first new auto rebate plan announced since the spring, when Chrysler gave rebates of up to $300 on most 1975 models to the general public. The 1975 plan expires at the end of this month. Chairman John J. Riccardo said the new plan, which takes immediate effect, is open to all active U.S. and Canadian employees with at least 90 days on the job, as well as all Chrysler retirees. Industry car sales have improved significantly since the start of the 1976-model year in October, but volumes for the year remain off from the already depressed levels of 1974. Chrysler car sales are down more than 20 per cent from last year.

3 die in Israel raid

TEL AVIV — The Israeli Foreign Ministry charged on Friday that three Arab raiders from Syria who killed three 19-year-old Israeli army sergeants studying at a religious school on the Golan Heights were on a head-hunting mission. The raiders, carrying submachine guns and hatchets, wounded two other students in the Thursday night attack and fled back across the border into Syria, the Israeli command said. It was the second raid carried out from Syria in 24 days and came on the eve of U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's visit to Syria to try to extend the life of the U.N. peace force on the northern front. Defense Minister Shimon Peres said the raid violated the troop disengagement agreement and cast doubts on Syria's willingness to extend the U.N. mandate.

Smallpox discovery

GENEVA — The detection of a new case of smallpox in Bangladesh has forced the World Health Organization to retract its announcement that Asia was free of the disease. The initial announcement was made on Nov. 13 after six weeks had passed without a new smallpox case being found anywhere in the country despite the continuing intensive village-by-village hunt by 12,000 health workers. Under the rules of the campaign launched by WHO in 1967 to rid the world of the disease by mass vaccinations, a country is not considered "free" of the disease until six weeks after the last case has been reported. However, another two years must pass without turning up another case.

Spaniards flock to Madrid to mourn Franco

Combined News Services

With Fascist salutes, flowers, tears and prayers, hundreds of thousands of Spaniards, including crippled war veterans, paid a wildly emotional farewell to Gen. Francisco Franco on Friday. Mourners paralyzed the streets of Madrid in the biggest outpouring in the capital in more than a quarter-century.

An elderly woman said she walked for four hours to see Franco's body "and I would have walked for four more."

But as Spaniards paid homage to Franco, who died Thursday at 82, the Caudillo's handpicked heir, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, faced growing opposition from the left, the right and dissident army officers who called his succession to power "another dictatorial act."

Franco lay in state in an open coffin, his face ravaged by a five-week fight against death. As night fell, the streets of Madrid were jammed with lines of mourners moving slowly and silently toward the National Palace, traditional residence of Spanish kings, to pay their last homage to the man who ruled them with an iron fist for 36 years.

Franco will be buried Sunday in the grandiose monument to Spain's Civil War dead built on his orders in the bleak Valley of the Fallen, 35 miles north of Madrid.

Pioneers

Four pioneers of flying, including World War I ace Frank Luke Jr., will be inducted today into the Aviation Hall of Fame in Dayton, Ohio.

Robert Campbell Reeve, president of Reeve Aleutian Airways who pioneered airline routes in South America before going to Alaska, is the only one of the four still living.

In addition to Luke, who shot down four enemy aircraft, and Reeve, the inductees are Reuben Hollis Fleet, Air Mail Pilot No. 1, and Roscoe Turner, the 1930s speed flier.

The four join 58 others enshrined over the past 14 years, including the Wright brothers, Eddie Rickenbacker, Wiley Post, Amelia Earhart and Charles Lindbergh.

Retrial

Former Florida Sen. Edward Gurney will be tried again on charges of lying to a grand jury and conspiring to extort money from contractors, a Justice Department spokesman said Friday in Washington.

A jury deadlocked on the two criminal charges after a six-month trial last August in Florida. Gurney was acquitted of five other charges.

Gurney, a Republican, chose not to seek re-election after being indicted in 1974.

Gregory

Civil rights activist Dick Gregory called on Friday for a demonstration at the White House on Thanksgiving Day in support of a new investigation into the slaying of Martin Luther King Jr.

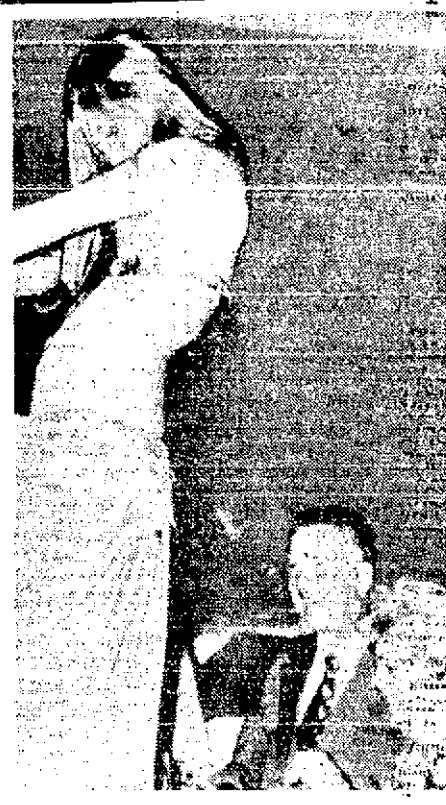

Gregory joined two Atlanta-based civil rights leaders in expressing "our shock and outrage at the recently uncovered facts regarding ... intolerable actions perpetrated by the FBI" against the slain civil rights leader.

Loan

A British philanthropist and the Israeli government have loaned Valery and Galina Panov $85,000 so the former Soviet ballet stars can buy a penthouse in Jerusalem.

The Panovs, who came to Israel from Russia last year and have been performing here and abroad, needed an apartment big enough for a ballet studio but couldn't afford to buy one in Jerusalem, said a spokesman for Mayor Teddy Kollek in Jerusalem.

George White, a British ballet lover who helped get the Panovs out of the Soviet Union, made a loan of $60,000 and Israel's Ministry of Immigrant Absorption put up the balance "with the same kind of loan we give for an immigrant starting a business," the spokesman said.

My motorcycle and truck have been at the lowest vehicle registration rate — $12 and $45, respectively, — for years. Under the new staggered, year-round renewal system, my motorcycle's registration is good for eight months and my truck for 16 months. The fee on my motorcycle should be two-thirds of $12, which is $8, but it's $9. For my truck, the fee should be $60, but it's $61, and I'd like to know why. If the California Department of Motor

A LITTLE LEARY

Vehicles has added $1 to each registration fee, that's quite a windfall for the state. W.D., Los Alamitos.

The renewal charge has from two to four parts, depending on the type of vehicle — an $11 annual registration charge, a license fee that is based on the value of the vehicle, a weight fee on trucks, and an environmental fee if the vehicle has a vanity license plate. Each of these fees goes to a different government agency — the first to DMV, the second to county property tax funds, the third to the state department of transportation for highway construction and the fourth to an environmental fund. Consequently, for bookkeeping purposes, the DMV had to compute each separately instead of simply prorating the total fees on a monthly basis. Because the $11 registration fee can't be evenly divided by 12, DMV officials decided to set the fees for each period of time; and they are as follows: seven months, $7; eight months, $8; nine months, $9; 10 months, $10; 11 months, $11; 12 months, $11; 13 months, $12; 14 months, $13; 15 months, $14; 16 months, $15; 17 months, $16; and 18 months, $17. The other fees are prorated on a 12-month basis and then added to the base registration fee. In most cases, the fees work out to $1 more than they would if the total charges were prorated.

King Family

Some friends told me that the King Family, which was such a success on television, is coming to the Long Beach Arena. I called the arena, but the person I talked to didn't have any information on this show. Can Action Line find out if the King Family will be performing in Long Beach, and if so, how I can get tickets? M.N., Long Beach.

The 30-member King Family will perform at the Elks Club Charity Ball Dec. 13 at the Long Beach Arena, 300 E. Ocean Blvd. Tickets, which cost $1 each, can be obtained at the Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St., Long Beach, Calif. 90815. If you order by mail, you should include a self-addressed, stamped envelop and address your ticket request to the attention of Gertie Howard. Starting this week, tickets also are on sale at the arena box office. The dance will be held from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., but the doors will open at 6 p.m. Proceeds will be used for cerebral palsy research and other Elks Club charity projects. The King Family show is built around the famous King Sisters, who sang with Horace Heidt's band in the 1940s. They retired in 1950, but in 1965, the sisters along with their husbands, children and grandchildren debuted as the King Family and had their own weekly television show for several seasons. One of the sisters is married to orchestra leader Alvin Rey and his band will provide music for dancing at the Elks Club ball.

Tax loss?

We lost our money in the San Antonio Shores land scheme in Baja California and would like to write off the loss on our income tax return, but no one at the Internal Revenue Service will tell us if we can. A.M., Carson.

An IRS spokesman said there is no definitive ruling on a situation such as yours. Section 165 of the Internal Revenue Service Code states that a loss is one that was incurred in a trade or business, in any transaction entered into for profit or in any casualty situation, which includes money or property that is stolen or damaged by fire or natural disasters. To deduct your investment, the loss has to fall under one of these three categories and whether or not it does is a subjective judgment that might vary with different IRS auditors. If you could prove that you invested in San Antonio Shores strictly to make a profit, the loss might be deemed deductible under the second category. If you could substantiate that you were swindled out of your money, you might be allowed to declare the loss under the casualty provision. In the case of San Antonio Shores, the developers apparently didn't own the land and, in any event, under Mexican law, the property couldn't be sold to U.S. citizens. The California attorney general filed a lawsuit charging the developers of San Antonio Shores with fraudulent business practices and a default judgment was issued against the defendants, but whether this would make your investment a casualty loss is unclear. The IRS spokesman said the only advice he could offer is for you to seek professional tax counseling before you file your return. He conceded that IRS offices are supposed to provide free information on which items are deductible, but said they aren't able to give definitive answers in all cases. If you declare the loss and the IRS subsequently denies the deduction, you can appeal such a decision and present any information to substantiate your position.

Boy sends 44c to 'save' Queen

It may not be much compared to the millions invested in the ship, but young Tony Dale of Bonita explained in a letter to the Long Beach City Council he wants to start a Save the Queen Mary Fund and "all I have is 44 cents right now."

Tony apparently had read incorrect reports that the city was going to scrap the Queen Mary, so he wrote to Mayor Thomas J. Clark, and the 44 cents in coins were taped to the letter.

"Please read this with concern, because I love that nice old ship," he wrote.

He said he is starting his fund in Bonita, a community near San Diego.

"On all the money," he wrote, "it says, 'In God We Trust.' Well, I trust all of you up there. I want you to put my money to the Queen Mary and not to some phoney fund."

"P.S. Don't keep the money for yourself. Think of me and that beautiful (sic) old ship, the Queen Mary, and right me back please."

Mayor Clark promised he would "right" Tony back and tell him the city isn't going to scrap the Queen Mary.

Suspect in LBSU campus rape cases under arrest

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

A man suspected of the attempted rape of a Long Beach State University coed in the campus library was arrested Friday by campus police as he allegedly tried to meet her a second time.

Long Beach police later booked Alfred James Pennett, 41, of 9145 Buttercup Ave., Fountain Valley, on suspicion of assault with attempt to commit rape, in connection with the incident Wednesday evening on the LBSU library's fifth floor.

HE WAS also booked on suspicion of raping an LBSU student near the pay parking lot across Seventh Street from the campus Oct. 17.

Campus Police Chief Jack Brick said he was distressed that three persons apparently witnessed the Wednesday night assault and failed to intervene or summon officers.

University President Stephen Horn called the witnesses' indifference "a shocking example of citizen irresponsibility."

"We will make every effort to maintain a secure campus, but we must have the active support of everyone to make that a reality," he said.

Horn termed the assault "outrageous" and said he is stepping up an antirape program that has been in effect on campus for more than a year and increasing police patrol.

THE ARREST of Pennett at Sambo's Restaurant, just off the campus at 1760 Bellflower Blvd., was made by campus police under Brick's direction. Campus police have jurisdiction for one mile outside the university, officers said.

Brick said he and two other officers, wearing old clothes, nabbed Pennett as he approached a look-alike stand-in for the victim. The decoy was a secretary in the campus police office, he said.

Pennett didn't resist arrest, Brick said.

He said the rape attempt occurred Wednesday about 7:30 p.m. when the victim, a 19-year-old student, was sitting at a desk among the stacks in a corner of the library. The assailant "grabbed her from behind, gagged her and bound her hands," Brick said.

The man apparently carried no weapon, but the student was so frightened she didn't resist, he said.

AFTER fondling the coed, the assailant demanded she meet him Friday at 11:30 a.m. at Sambo's, and she nodded to acknowledge the demand, Brick said. Brick said the victim told him that three other persons witnessed the incident but did nothing.

The coed told police she freed herself, then boarded an elevator to leave the library. She said she was horrified when the assailant got on the same elevator at the third floor and began to molest her again, Brick said. However, he added, the man

When the elevator arrived at the first floor, the man followed the coed out of the library, but she ran to a classroom where her boyfriend was taking a night class, Brick said. He took her home and then drove her to the campus police station to report the incident.

Brick said Orange County law enforcement agencies were asked to watch the victim's home because the assailant had noted her name, address and phone number from textbooks she had with her in the library.

A SKETCH of the man was drawn by a Los Alamitos police artist and used in Pennett's arrest when he arrived at Sambo's, Brick said.

Brick said the rape in the parking lot across the street from the college occurred Oct. 17 at 7:30 a.m. In that incident the rapist forced the victim to accompany him to a ravine behind the lot.

Examiner hurt in driving test

An examiner for the Department of Motor Vehicles was hurt Friday when a car driven by an applicant for a driver's license collided with an oncoming bus, Long Beach police said.

In critical condition in Pacific Hospital's intensive care unit Friday night was Vincent W. Jones, 62, of 5856 Pavo St. He suffered lacerations and head injuries.

The driver, Diane Lynn Davidson, 23, of 500 Ximeno Ave., suffered only minor injuries.

Officers said she was driving north on Magnolia Avenue during her license test at 10:50 a.m. when a southbound Long Beach Public Transportation Co. bus turned left in front of her car at Burnett Street, officers said.

No one on the bus was seriously injured, and no one was cited or held, pending results of an investigation, police said.

Body found; beating cited

A Compton man was found beaten to death at his home Friday, police said.

Officers identified the victim as Douglas Stitt, 57, of 470 W. Alburts St., a city building inspector.

His widow and stepdaughter discovered the body in bed about 3:45 a.m.

UFW WORKERS protesting "firings for union activity" vow to continue their occupation of Gov. Brown's office "until something is done."

—AP Wirephoto

UFW to continue sit-in

SACRAMENTO (AP) — United Farm Worker supporters pledged Friday to remain in Gov. Brown's office until he acts on their complaints stemming from the state's new farm labor election law.

That promise came after about 80 workers talked with the Democratic governor for two hours in his reception room in a meeting that ended at 2:30 a.m. Friday. The sit-in began Thursday. Dolores Huerta, vice president of Cesar Chavez' UFW, told reporters Brown had listened to the group's complaints alleging grower firings of UFW supporters and had said: "It takes time."

Mrs. Huerta said a man with several children living on a $30-a-week unemployment check for the last few weeks doesn't have "time." She said the UFW sit-in was intended to get state action on grower firings and other unfair labor practice complaints. Questioned about UFW complaints, state Agricultural Labor Relations Board spokesmen have said they are handling the complaints from the UFW and rival Teamsters Union as fast as they can.

But Mrs. Huerta was firm. "We will be here every day until something happens," she said.

Around Mrs. Huerta, 40 workers were sitting in the room. Children played on the floor. Men with big sombreros sat in chairs against the wall. One woman wore a shawl with the UFW black eagle on it.

Brown's press secretary, Bill Stall, said the administration had obtained a list of the ranches where the UFW said the firings occurred and it was looking into the matter.

Asked if Brown would allow the demonstrators to remain in his reception area, Stall added that issue was being discussed.

The protesting workers were from San Diego County. Some said they had worked on one ranch for over 10 years before they were fired for union activity.

Earlier this week, Chavez said a survey of 11 UFW offices showed 1,165 workers had been fired for union activity in September and October.

Meanwhile, the latest Associated Press tally shows the UFW with 165 election wins covering 16,600 workers. The Teamsters have 98 wins covering 10,500 workers. At 19 ranches, a majority of workers voted for no union, and 47 elections remain undecided due to challenges.

Man who shot deputy guilty of manslaughter

SALINAS (AP) — A jury convicted Zane Caldwell of voluntary manslaughter Friday in the fatal shooting of a Yuba County sheriff's deputy last year.

Caldwell, 20, sat impassively as the panel of four women and eight men returned its verdict. The jurors had deliberated four days.

The judge recessed the jury until Dec. 1 when the second phase of the trial will start. It will determine whether Caldwell was legally insane at the time of the murder.

"I think it's the right decision. It fits the facts," said defense attorney Thomas Matthews.

The district attorney, who had sought a first-degree murder conviction, refused comment.

Caldwell pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity to killing Yuba County Deputy Sheriff Donald Brown, 38. Brown was gunned down at a cabin in rural Camptonville in November 1974 when he tried to arrest Caldwell for allegedly threatening to shoot passersby.

Over welfare rules compliance

Plumas County vs. state

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state of California is preparing to haul tiny Plumas County into court because it refused to comply with welfare rules, a deputy state attorney general said Friday.

The mountainous county, population 14,000, and the state, population 21 million, had been at odds earlier this year over welfare requirements, but a truce had been negotiated.

Now, a dispute over retroactive payments has the state preparing a request that the county be held in contempt of court, Deputy Atty. Gen. John Fourt said.

Fourt said the state can't afford to allow Plumas County to do its own thing because federal funding could be jeopardized if all counties don't play by the rules. "The state will pursue diligently against recalcitrant counties to see that they do comply," he commented.

Marion Woods, state Department of Benefit Payments director, had given the county until 5 p.m. Thursday to change its mind and agree to make an undetermined amount of back payments that might be owed welfare recipients.

"We responded that we are not going to comply," said Baird McKnight, county counsel, carrying out the wishes of the County Board of Supervisors.

"I think the main issue is they are telling us to spend money that we did not budget for and do not care to spend," McKnight said.

He said estimates of cost to the county are "nebulous" but he said the bill could be from $10,000 to $20,000.

Fourt disagreed, saying Plumas County has had only one claimant under the retroactive payments program.

And Fourt added that of a $10,000-$20,000 total cost, the county would pay only 16 and two-thirds of administrative costs and 25 per cent of the actual benefits. The federal government pays 50 per cent, the state 25 per cent.

Fourt said he was preparing papers to be filed next week in Sacramento County Superior Court.

The earlier dispute was settled when county officials met with Gov. Brown, and got his approval to help develop pilot welfare program tailored for smaller counties.

The latest dispute stems from a Superior Court ruling July 28 that every county welfare department in the state research all cases back to 1971 at pay certain additional benefits.

They include $60 month to each pregnant mother on welfare during that time and more money for those who shared the homes with old age recipients.

Regents oppose Isla Vista plan

IRVINE (AP) — University of California regents Friday approved a resolution opposing incorporation of the community of Isla Vista adjacent to the UC Santa Barbara campus.

Several regents, including industrialist Norton Simon, spoke against the resolution, arguing that the university shouldn't take a stand on the proposed incorporation of the area where rioting erupted in 1968.

Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally urged that the Isla Vista question be studied further but his motion was defeated and the regents went on record as opposing the incorporation.

The proposed incorporation is currently before the Santa Barbara County Local Agency Formation Commission, and approval by the panel would place the matter before the voters.

The regents also approved a long range development plan for the Santa Barbara campus that would cut projected student enrollment in the 1981-82 school year by 40 per cent. An environmental impact report submitted with the UCSB development plan also was approved.

UC President David S. Saxon said the university is making efforts to alleviate operating losses suffered by UC medical facilities in Sacramento and Orange Counties and said county and university officials are meeting on the problem.

Saxon said the University has no plans to close any of its medical facilities.

Saxon also delivered the president's report, noting that the nine-campus system is now receiving almost $300 million in federal funds, a sum which he said represented more than 6 per cent of national federal funding at the university level in 1974.

Saxon quoted a National Science Foundation report showing that the UCLA and UC San Diego campuses were among the top five colleges in the nation in terms of federal support.

Medi-Cal recipients to get refund notices

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state began mailing notices out this week to about 60,000 Medi-Cal recipients who stand to receive a total reimbursement of up to $2 million following a court ruling.

Bob Nance, spokesman for the Department of Health, said in an interview Friday that a ruling by Sacramento Superior Court Judge Irving Perluss prompted the state's action.

From Sept. 1, 1971, to Feb. 1, 1973, the state had in effect a rule that required Medi-Cal recipients to pay a portion of their

Medi-Cal bills in some cases if they earned a certain amount of money.

Perluss held in his ruling that a person either is or is not a Medi-Cal recipient. He ordered the reimbursement to any recipient who had paid a share of his or her medical bills during that time period.

Nance said the state was mailing letters to the most recent addresses of all recipients affected by the ruling.

The case stemmed from a suit against the Reagan administration, Nance said.

Fromme not sure she'll take stand

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lynette Fromme refused Friday to say whether she would testify in her own defense, and her attorney said that if she declined he would rest his case immediately.

Attorney John Virga said outside the court that Miss Fromme told him "if she cannot have the Manson family here, she doesn't want to testify."

Miss Fromme, a follower of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, is charged with attempting to kill President Ford. She has repeatedly demanded that Manson be allowed to participate in her trial.

The 27-year-old defendant, who has boycotted proceedings since Nov. 7, was brought into court late in the day after telling Virga she did not want to testify.

VIRGA asked U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride to make his own inquiry of the red-haired defendant.

"If she does not testify then I'm going to rest," Virga said.

Miss Fromme, clad in a powder blue pants suit, stood before the judge as he asked: "Do you wish to testify?"

"Your honor," she said, "I can't answer that question right now."

"This is an on-going trial," the judge said. "We have a jury waiting."

Miss Fromme replied: "I'll answer it on Monday."

MacBride recessed court until Monday morning to give her time to make her decision. If she still refuses to take the stand, it appeared likely the trial would near its end with the resting of the defense case.

If she chooses to testify, proceedings could go on for two or three more days.

IF convicted, she faces a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

At Friday's session Miss Fromme remained absent from the courtroom while the jury was present.

Virga called only six witnesses in his effort to prove that the Manson family follower never intended to kill Ford when she allegedly pointed a gun at him in a park near the Capitol on Sept. 5.

His first witness was a young auto mechanic,

Peter Perry. He said that during a 1973 outing at a firing range, the tiny red-haired defendant skillfully loaded and fired a .22-caliber pistol similar to the .45 caliber pistol Secret Service agents say they took from her.

Prosecutors have sought to show that Miss Fromme didn't shoot Ford when she pointed the gun at him because she didn't know how to advance the bullet into the firing chamber. But Perry said that during two days of shooting, Miss Fromme accurately loaded a clip, advanced the bullet and fired.

THE defense contends Miss Fromme went to the Capitol Park where Ford was to appear, not intending to shoot him, but merely aiming to gain publicity for Manson and his jailed followers. She had said they deserve a new trial.

Virga called a controversial witness — college student James Damir — and told jurors for the first time of his disputed version of Miss Fromme's words as she was being wrestled to the ground.

Damir confirmed he told police she had shouted, "It's not loaded anyway. It's not loaded anyway."

However, when further questioned, he said he no longer remembers Miss Fromme saying those words and instead thinks she said, "It didn't go off anyway. What are you worried about?"

VIRGA, who had described Damir as a crucial witness, exclaimed, "As you sit there, you are saying you didn't hear Lynette Fromme say, 'It's not loaded anyway' over and over?"

"I don't recall her saying that, yes," Damir replied.

Asked why he repeated those words to police, he said, "I've thought about it a lot and I can't explain it."

Virga has said the government sought to suppress that testimony because it would indicate Miss Fromme knew there was no bullet in the gun's chamber when she aimed it at Ford.

It was alleged concealment of Damir's statements that led to Virga's unsuccessful motion to dismiss charges against Miss Fromme.

Woman lawyer request denied

Emily Harris lost another bid Friday for appointment of a woman cocounsel, but Ruth Astle, the lawyer in question, said she would remain without pay as part of the defense.

Mrs. Harris and her husband, William, are charged with robbery, assault and kidnapping in an alleged Symbionese Liberation Army crime spree in May 1974. Patricia Hearst, also indicted with the Harris, is awaiting trial on a bank robbery charge in Northern California.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler turned down a defense request to appoint Mrs. Astle on grounds that she lacked experience in criminal cases. Mrs. Astle, 28, of

San Francisco, was admitted to the bar last March 5.

Brandler's ruling means that Mrs. Astle will not be paid out of public funds, but can remain without pay.

Mrs. Harris has made several attempts since she was brought here last September to have a woman cocounsel appointed, arguing that only a woman can adequately represent her feminist point of view.

The Harris have declared themselves unable to pay for legal counsel. Leonard Weinglass was appointed to represent Mrs. Harris and Deputy Public Defender Ed Rucker was named to represent Harris.

Cleaver put into custody of state

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The United States Friday technically turned over custody of Eldridge Cleaver to the state of California, but his release from a federal prison was up in the air.

The only federal charge against the former revolutionary, unlawful flight to avoid prosecution, was dismissed in San Francisco by U.S. Magistrate Owen Woodruff.

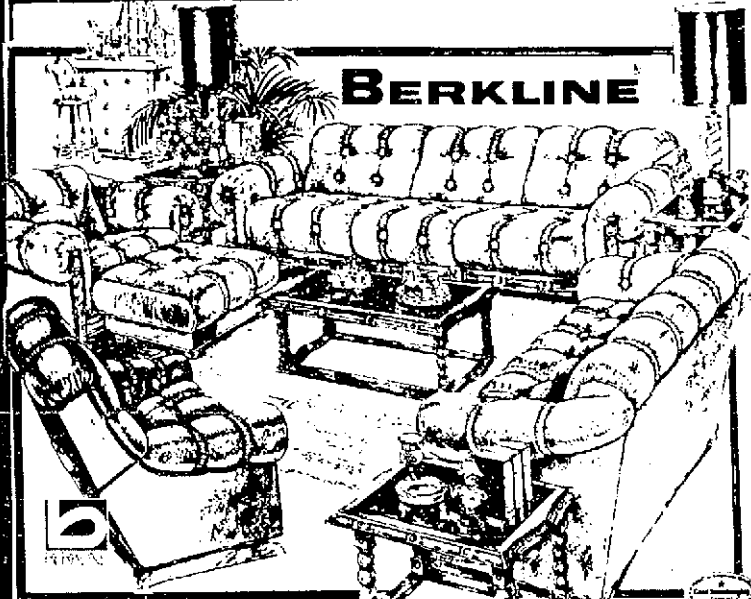

Cleaver will remain in the Metropolitan Correctional Facility in San Diego

"When the state comes for him, he'll be here," said Williams amid indications his celebrated prisoner may be around for days.

CLEAVER, 39, ended seven years of self-imposed exile and was flown from Paris early this week. He is expected to face three counts each of assault and attempted murder stemming from a 1968 shootout between Black Panthers and Oakland police.

JOHN BLEWETT, dressed as Santa Claus, has an early visit Friday with Vietnamese refugee children on the last day of their classroom studies before leaving Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Refugee children 'excel in math, eager about system'

FT. INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa. (AP) — School ended Friday for Indochinese refugee children here, with state educators grading them excellent in math, confused by science and eager to learn the American system.

Classes covering kindergarten through 12th grade have been conducted since September at the refugee center.

THE CLASSES ended because the center is due to close at the end of this month. There were 2,036 Vietnamese and Cambodian children when the program started and 671 on the final day. The center here has processed 20,000 refugees since late May.

"They were exceptional in math," said Ken

Adams, a basic education associate in the state Department of Education, which conducted the program. "Our senior students were in calculus."

"They did fairly well in science, but to many this was something they were not exposed to in any great quantity."

Adams said some of the long, tongue-twisting words on plant life were difficult to explain. Science was not emphasized in the refugees' native school systems, he added.

Other subjects taught were English, writing, social studies, physical education, music and art.

Most students were from middle class families and had been educated in private schools, Adams said. The majority attended class for just over two weeks, although some stayed four weeks.

"IN SOCIAL studies we tried to give them a comparison from their type of culture to the culture they'll be exposed to," Adams said.

"We told them we are made up of many different nationalities and have certain traditions. They knew nothing about Halloween and Veterans Day. We now have Santa Claus visiting and that's new to many of them."

The refugees also had trouble understanding this country's concept of family life. In Southeast Asia, the immediate family means parents, grandparents, nephews, cousins, aunts and uncles.

Unified Vietnam balloting agreed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — North and South Vietnam announced Friday they will move soon to form a single government for the divided country — a step widely expected since the Communist victory last April over the former American-backed Saigon government.

Radio broadcasts from Saigon and Hanoi monitored in Bangkok said a political conference of the two Vietnams decided to hold elections soon leading to a unified government "based on independence and socialism."

Communist leaders of North Vietnam, whose forces plus the Viet Cong drove out the U.S.-supported regime in the South, were expected to dominate the unified state.

National Assembly for the whole country."

"The number of deputies to the National Assembly will be made proportional to the population," the broadcast declared, and "there will be a deputy for about every 100,000 inhabitants."

IT IS estimated that North Vietnam has a population of 23.8 million and South Vietnam 20.5 million.

Hanoi said the National Assembly "will define the political system of the state, elect leading state organs and work out a new constitution of the unified Vietnam."

A consultative conference between 25-member delegations from North and South Vietnam opened last Saturday in Saigon and agreed on "national reunification in all aspects," the broadcasts said.

Quoting Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam, they reported "the conference has totally agreed on the implementation of a national election ... to set up the National Assembly. The National Assembly will nominate the governing body of the unified Vietnam."

"THE conference also has agreed unanimously upon the time of election, number of representatives, nature of the National Assembly, and the first session of the National Assembly."

The broadcast gave no details, but presumed adopted were proposals for a secret ballot, a minimum voting age of 18 and a 25-year age requirement for candidates.

Among issues reported left for the National Assembly to decide were the name of the unified state, the national flag and what city would be the national capital.

Despite their standing policy of eventual reunification, both North and South Vietnam applied last summer for separate United Nations membership. Their applications were vetoed by the United States first in August and again in October in retaliation for exclusion of South Korea from the world organization.

THE RULERS of a single Vietnam face many practical problems of merger, presumably the reason that unification has been delayed so far.

North Vietnam has had a Communist form of government for many years, while the South was ruled until April by a series of anti-Communist regimes. Saigon, a city swollen by refugees during years of conflict, is undergoing major changes instituted by the new rulers, as are lesser urban areas and rural districts in the South. Occasional clashes with die-hard troops still are reported, though, a stagnant economy, not armed warfare, has become a major problem for the new Communist regime.

Ruling may hamper crime reporting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The news media may be prohibited from reporting confessions and such things as criminal records and some statements by prosecutors in advance of criminal trials, Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun said Friday.

Blackmun acted on an order by a county judge in Nebraska restricting news coverage of a mass murder case. As an order by a single justice, his action is confined to the Nebraska case and does not establish binding precedent.

In Omaha, Neb., G. Woodson Howe, a vice president of the Omaha World-Herald and spokesman for a group that challenged the county judge's ruling, said an appeal to the full court was being filed immediately.

Besides seeking to vacate those portions of Blackmun's ruling that went against the news organizations, the appeal asks that the full court stay the orders of the county judge immediately.

There are no regular sessions of the Supreme Court until Dec. 1 and no regular conferences of the justices until Dec. 5.

Blackmun set aside a ban by the county judge on reporting medical testimony in open court. Such testimony, as well as details about crimes and identities of victims disclosed at open preliminary hearings "in themselves do not implicate a particular...defendant," he said.

But Blackmun left undisturbed a ban on reporting confessions and circumstances of the defendant's arrest. He said a court could order the media not to report such items, as well as a defendant's criminal record and some statements by prosecutors against the defendant's interest.

It would be up to the defense and the prosecution, if it wished to join the argument, to prove that reporting such things would "irreparably impair" the ability of jurors to reach independent and impartial judgments, he said.

"I conclude that certain facts that strongly implicate an accused may be restrained from publication by the media prior to his trial," Blackmun said.

He also invalidated the judge's adoption of a set of voluntary guidelines for trial coverage that had been worked out by Nebraska newsmen and lawyers.

The guidelines, drafted some time ago and used before in Nebraska as a guide to trial coverage in general, describe as generally appropriate for media reporting:

—Identities of the defendant and the victim, along with biographical information about them.

—Circumstances of the arrest.

—Evidence against the defendant "if, in view of the time and other circumstances, such disclosure and reporting are not likely to interfere with a fair trial."

The guidelines describe as generally inappropriate for media reporting:

—Confessions or other statements of the accused unless they have been made "to representatives of the press or to the public."

—Opinions about guilt or innocence, predictions about the outcome of a trial, results of examinations and tests, statements about anticipated testimony and in-court statements made with the jury absent "which, if reported, would likely interfere with a fair trial."

The guidelines also say that reporting an accused person's prior criminal record "should be considered very carefully" and "should generally be avoided."

While the reporters and lawyers who drew up the guidelines intended them to be voluntary, the county judge made them mandatory in the mass murder case by making them a part of his order.

In setting them aside, Blackmun said: "I find them on the whole... sufficiently riddled with vague and indefinite admonitions... that I have concluded that the best and momentary course is to stay their mandatory and wholesale imposition in the present context."

"The state courts, nonetheless, are free forthwith to reimpose particular provisions included in the guidelines so long as they are deemed pertinent to the facts of this particular case and so long as they are adequately specific and in keeping with the remainder of this order."

Blackmun did not distinguish between confessions made to officials and confessions made to the media or to the public. He barred the reporting of all confessions, saying: "A prospective juror who has read or heard of the confession in statements repeatedly in the news may well be unable to form an independent judgment as to the guilt or innocence from the evidence adduced at trial."

The restrictive order was issued Oct. 27 by Lincoln County, Neb., District Judge Hugh Stuart. It bars reporting of specified information concerning the case of Erwin Charles Simants, who is charged with slaying six members of a Sutherland, Neb., family.

Blackmun held that the voluntary guidelines could not hold up as a court order because they were "riddled with vague and indefinite admonitions" such as that publication of a defendant's criminal record should be considered "very carefully."

Schemes proliferating

Ailing economy prompts boom in mail order fraud

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press

The ailing economy has prompted a boom in mail order fraud, according to the government, which says swindlers are taking advantage of concern about money to lure consumers with promises of something for nothing. Frauds range from fake correspondence schools offering little more than a fancy diploma to contests where the "winner" winds up paying more for his prize than he would if he went out and bought the item in the first place. The Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration says there has been a recent increase in bogus schemes that prey on people of low income, with little schooling, desperately trying to improve their economic status.

TO HELP consumers,

the Postal Service has published a booklet called "Mail Fraud Laws," available free by writing Consumer Information, Dept. 54, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. The booklet details the most common frauds and points out that an 1872 law provides fines of up to $1,000 and prison sentences up to five years for anyone using the mails to further an illegal scheme. Here are some of the frauds to look out for:

—Chain-referral selling: Consumers are offered the opportunity to buy an expensive product like a television set and are told they can easily earn back the price in commissions by getting their friends to make similar purchases. The product costs more through the mail than it does in retail stores and the buyer rarely earns more than one or two commissions.

—Fake contests: "Congratulations! You've just won a sewing machine. Come to our offices and select the cabinet you want." Watch out! You'll probably wind up paying more for the cabinet than the combined unit is worth.

—Debt consolidation: Beware of solicitors who tell you to turn over all your payment books and debt records and pay them a specified sum each week. For the first few weeks, your checks will be used to pay off the consolidator's fee rather than your original creditors and you may not find out until the merchant threatens to repossess your property.

Orders up in durable products

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported Friday that business orders for durable goods rebounded in October, providing evidence that industry is providing the economy with the spending boost analysts say is necessary to sustain the recovery.

Durable goods are those with a life expectancy of three years or longer and include production equipment and facilities as well as such consumer items as automobiles.

The Commerce Department said the volume of new orders in October was up by 1.3 per cent to a total of $42.8 billion. The volume of orders had slipped in September for the first time in six months, dropping 1.1 per cent.

Herman I. Leibling, the Treasury Department's top staff economist, said the figures indicated that the latest increase was a solid sign of continued economic growth.

Leibling said the drop in the volatile defense goods industry of $303 million could be discounted in attempting to assess the underlying strength of business spending.

And factoring out the defense fluctuations, spending by business on capital goods showed an increase of 3.5 per cent.

"This supports the notion we're on the road" to continued economic growth, Leibling said.

The recovery so far has been fueled primarily by increased consumer spending, triggered by the tax relief and rebates of last June.

The figures showed that the only other industrial sector showing a lower level of orders during October was the transportation equipment industry.

Sightings of missiles unsubstantiated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration denied Friday that any missiles had been fired in an area where an Eastern Airlines pilot reported seeing what looked like missiles pass his plane Wednesday.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman also said his agency had found no evidence of missile firings, and said there was a possibility the pilot had seen flaming meteorites. The spokesman said meteorite showers were common in the area this time of year.

The Eastern pilot, Capt. C. S. Wilson of Hollywood,

Fla., said he told the FAA he saw unidentified objects pass near his plane while flying about 60 miles south of Richmond, Va., Wednesday.

"I saw what I first thought to be a formation of three or four aircraft above us ... As I looked closer all I could see were short vapor trails," Wilson said in a statement released from Eastern's Miami headquarters.

"I have never seen a salvo of missiles in flight, but by the pictures I've seen, this is what missiles would look like to me," he added.

Wilson said he saw the objects for only five or six seconds and called to the copilot to look. But "before he could pick up my line of vision whatever it had completely vanished," he said.

The Eastern plane was on a flight from West Palm Beach, Fla., to Washington at the time of the sighting. It was descending from 24,000 feet to 15,000 feet in preparation for a landing at Washington's National Airport.

Wilson said the weather was clear at his altitude, and visibility was unlimited. He said the unidentified object passed 2,000 feet above his plane and about five miles away, traveling from east to west.

There are several military bases in the area south of Richmond, and missile-carrying jets often fly in the restricted military airspace near the commercial airways. Those military planes in the past have sometimes strayed out of their restricted zone and into commercial airways.

There also is a NASA base in the area that often launches missiles for atmospheric research.

A Defense Department spokesman said an exhaustive search of all military branches had found that no missile-carrying planes were in the area of the reported sighting on Wednesday afternoon. The spokesman also said no land-based missiles had been fired.

A NASA spokesman said missiles were fired Wednesday but no launches were made anywhere near the time of the reported sighting.

The Defense Department spokesman said his department was continuing to look into the reported sighting.

The reported sighting was relayed by the Eastern pilot to the FAA air traffic control center at Leesburg, Va., Wednesday. The FAA immediately began an investigation. It completed a computer study of the plane's position earlier Friday and turned over all of its information to the Defense Department.

Yank bears carrot to Moscow

MOUNTAIN VIEW (AP) — An American scientist headed Friday for Moscow carrying a refrigerated suitcase containing, among other things, a sliced carrot.

The carrot, single carrot cells, fish eggs and some material for a radioactive experiment will be aboard a Soviet satellite when it begins its 22-day voyage. It's all part of the joint U.S.-Soviet Biological Program — Biosputnik.

The scientist, Dr. John Tremor of the Ames Research Center here, told newsmen researchers want to study how weightless gravity conditions in space affect plant growth. He said preliminary evidence shows weightless-ness speeds up such growth.

Tremor said in Moscow he will join a scientist from the Johnson Space Center, who is bringing the fish eggs.

No exact date has been set for the launching, but it is expected to come in the next couple of weeks.

Tremor said all the articles are readily available in the Soviet Union, but that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's contributions symbolize the cooperative nature of the project.

He said if not for the Soviet flight, American scientists would have to wait for the U.S. space shuttles in the 1980s to continue studying weightlessness and growth.

Seven other experiments involving bone and tissue from rats and fruit flies will be placed aboard the Kosmos satellite by Soviet scientists, Tremor said. After recovery of the spacecraft, all the data will be brought to the United States for analysis, he said.

Bikini in thesis a way to bomb out

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) — Kathryn King may have to rewrite her entire master's thesis on celestial navigation.

The controversy arose when Miss King, a 24-year-old Lamar University student, completed her thesis and included a picture of herself demonstrating a sextant.

A sextant is an instrument used by mariners and aviators to navigate. For the picture, Miss King wore a bikini.

Miss King said Graduate Dean E.E. Blackburn Jr. wants the picture removed and maybe the entire thesis rewritten. He has suggested she wear a long gown to demonstrate the sextant in a photograph, she said.

University President John Gray has supported Blackburn's opposition to the picture. But Drs. J.M. Stark and Sterling Crim, members of the thesis committee, approved. Stark, who worked with Miss King on the thesis, said, "We had planned to show the use of a sextant by a photograph. I didn't anticipate any problem."

Crim said, "I see nothing wrong with it."

Miss King is to undergo an oral examination on her thesis Tuesday. Her lawyer and a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union will be present, she said.

The issue "is ridiculous," said Miss King. She said she included the picture merely to demonstrate proper use of the sextant.

Phaseout of foreign arms aid protested

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department protested Friday against a Senate proposal to phase out U.S. foreign military assistance grants within two years.

The phaseout, along with additional curbs on foreign military sales, was introduced by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., as a substitute for the administration's foreign military aid bill.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON Forecast for Sunday

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strive for peace through mixed influences and potential conflicts between others who try to get you to take sides. Tonight you receive good news and inspiration! Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Depend upon yourself and your own resources rather than the opinions and guidance friends offer. Others question the feasibility of the plans. Explain your ideas sensibly. Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Mental pursuits are favored over physical exercises. Work at educational activities, sell ideas and play intellectual games. Conservative approaches to annoyances succeed with patience. Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Older people and traditional issues take precedence and must be dealt with before you tend to your concerns. All parties are free to change for the better. Then it's your turn. Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): After a low point in your cycle of persuasive ability, there's no way but up this Sunday. Be receptive to new ideas and add them to your plans once you understand them fully. Check details. Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can find something bright and interesting in the most humdrum habits and familiar people if you'll only look with an open mind. In later hours, you glow with enthusiasm. Share the mood. Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Use your mind rather than your muscles today. You can plow your case well with important people. Good advice is available for the listening. Keep later hours open for fun.

Catholic antiabortion plan draws opposition

WASHINGTON — Even before the Roman Catholic Bishops of the United States passed their resolution Thursday announcing they will wage an all-out political campaign to obtain a right-to-life amendment to the Constitution, Jewish, Protestant and secular organizations charged that such antiabortion activity is in violation of the separation of church and state.

By unanimous voice vote the bishops approved the extensive antiabortion fight in what has been their most politically oriented annual conference ever. They said that they would keep the fight going as long as they need to — "10 years, if necessary."

BY INFERENCE they also vowed to press more vigorously their fight for aid to parochial schools. In addition, in the final day of the conference, the bishops passed strong resolutions supporting government policies providing for full employment for anyone needing a job and "a decent home for every American."

The religious coalition for abortion rights, which has 23 Protestant and Jewish denominations and agencies in its membership, said that if Catholics, through political action, are able to get such an amendment passed, then it would be an abrogation of the rights of people not having the same religious views to practice their own religions.

The coalition's vice-chairman, Richard Sternberger, said that "because a constitutional amendment would deny to other faiths their basic rights to follow their own teachings on abortion, we must view this plan...as an abrogation of our first amendment rights to practice our own religions." Sternberger is director of the Mid-Atlantic Council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Mary Jane Patterson, acting director of the Washington office of the United Presbyterian Church, said that the action by the bishops "reveals an unwillingness to heed legislative and judicial conclusions on this issue." She is secretary of the coalition.

Dr. Dudley Ward, general secretary of the 10-million-member United Methodist Church's Board of Church and Society, said, "the issue of abortion is a highly charged one on which many religious faiths disagree. We therefore, hope our Catholic brethren will consider the ramifications in the ecumenical community of enacting into law one religious viewpoint."

NEW YORK'S Terence Cardinal Cooke, the moving force behind the amendment drive, said "trying to make this a Catholic issue — that's a big hoax...that's just ridiculous. It isn't just a Catholic issue."

Cooke said, "our surveys show that the vast majority of American people are unhappy with the permissive abortion on request, and also are unhappy with the pressure that is being used, going beyond the Supreme Court decision...threatening the very rights of an individual to serve his own conscience."

The National Abortion Rights Action League charged that "the attempted imposition of Catholic beliefs upon our society is clearly a violation of this very fundamental principle (of separation of church and state) and leaves no room for our constitutional right to freedom of religious beliefs."

"Not only is the church hoping to impose its moral beliefs on non-Catholics, but also on the thousands of Catholics who support abortion rights," the NARA statement said.

BOTH Cooke and the bishops resolution contend that actions against permissive abortion need not be considered as strictly sectarian in nature, even though there are strong Eastern Orthodox, Evangelical Protestant, Mormon and varied Jewish convictions against abortion as well as the general Catholic opposition.

Even though the woman's lobby last year sued the U.S. Catholic Conference, which represents the country's 48.7 million Catholics, for failing to register as a lobby in violation of the Federal Lobbying Act, Cooke would not concede that the stepped-up, politically oriented campaign constitutes lobbying by the Catholic church.

Subpoenaed records in that suit showed that the bishops used $4 million in 1973 to finance antiabortion activities. It was on Jan. 22 that year that the Supreme Court ruled in favor of women determining whether to have an abortion up through the first three months of pregnancy.

THE BISHOPS did not deny using $4 million that year to fight abortion legislation and subsequently registered with congress as the National Committee for a Human Life Amendment.

None of the bishops would venture a figure on how much the conference will pump into the grassroots "citizens lobbies" called for in the resolution, but Cooke intimated that the bulk of the money would come from concerned laymen, including non-Catholics, who would keep the pressure on politicians and the courts at the local level.

Shell set to settle for $1.5 million

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shell Oil Co. said Friday it has agreed to pay $1.5 million in settlement of a suit by persons claiming that the firm's Martinez refinery damaged their nearby property.

The class action suit filed by a group of property owners in 1968 alleged that since Sept. 1, 1968, operations at the refinery had been a "source of annoyance and damage" to persons and property because of certain conditions created by the operation. These, it said, included "noise, light, vibration and the emission of liquid, gaseous and particulate matter."

Shell officials said the firm denied all charges of wrongdoing or any liability and stressed that the settlement shouldn't be construed as an admission of liability.

The firm said it has taken steps to abate conditions resulting in the complaint and has spent more than $10.5 million for pollution control equipment.

A legal notice published in San Francisco Bay area newspapers Friday asked potential recipients wishing to file a claim to fill out a printed form and submit it by Jan. 30.

The $1.5 million will be distributed by a formula based on whether a person owned or merely occupied the property, the period of time involved, the property's value and its proximity to the refinery.

Mideast boycott list asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Ford's attempts to lessen the impact of the Arab boycott, the chairman of a House investigations subcommittee still wants documents telling what U.S. firms complied with trade restrictions against those who did business with Israel.

The House investigations panel of the Commerce Committee recently found Commerce Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton in contempt of Congress for refusing to give up the subpoenaed papers that would identify U.S. firms which complied with Arab requests that they participate in the boycott.

"I applaud the steps taken by President Ford to minimize the impact within the United States of the Arab boycott," said subcommittee Chairman John E. Moss, D-Calif. But he said none of Ford's actions lessen the need of Congress for the boycott reports filed by American firms.

"Congress must have access to these unedited reports in order to determine whether new or amended legislation is necessary to square practices with U.S. policy declarations," said Moss in a statement.

"Congress cannot allow itself to be spoon fed the information the executive feels it should have," declared Moss.

THE President has directed Morton to amend the Export Administration Act's regulations to prohibit U.S. exporters, banks, insurers, freight forwarders and shipping companies from complying in any way with boycott requests that would discriminate against U.S. citizens or firms.

Last month, Moss asked the Justice Department to examine documents he obtained from private sources which he said appeared to be evidence of both primary and secondary boycott and possible violations of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The President said this week he had been advised by the Justice Department that refusal of an American firm to deal with another in order to comply with a restrictive trade practice by a foreign country raises serious questions under U.S. antitrust laws.

Ford said the department is currently looking for any violations.

"None of the actions taken by the President lessen the need of Congress to obtain any information it deems necessary to perform its oversight responsibilities," said Moss. "And in no way do these steps relieve Morton of the responsibility to comply with the subcommittee's subpoena."

Sharp eye on hiring overseas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department moved to carry out President Ford's orders Friday to protect Americans against discrimination because of foreign boycotts.

Labor Secretary John Dunlop issued a memorandum requiring federal contractors with overseas projects to report any attempt by foreign governments to exclude certain employees or job applicants.

Contractors now must notify the State Department if they believe an employee or potential employee is denied an entry visa because of religion or national origin.

The President announced Thursday a series of measures barring discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex or national origin — actions intended to protect Jews from Arab boycott activities.

The executive order exempts contractors only when hiring persons outside the United States for work to be performed overseas.

People and ideas Our finest festival

Thanksgiving is now America's best holiday. The others have declined or have been somewhat corrupted.

Christmas, a Christian holy day, is the worst muddle of all. After all the years since it was started in the fourth century it remains a close relative of Saturnalia when the Romans celebrated the end of the year by exchanging gifts, setting their slaves free for a day and getting drunk in high patrician style.

Memorial Day, founded to honor the memory of the dead, especially those slain in battle, now features a crazy auto race.

The Glorious Fourth, now that patriotism is out of style, is a day for all Americans to acquire glorious sunburns.

Labor Day celebrates the opening of the school year.

But Thanksgiving remains very much as it was in the beginning. It is a time of feasting with family and friends. It is a religious day, but not exclusively Christian. Rather, it is a time for all people to remember their blessings. It is a national day, a time to remember our American heritage.

Happy Thanksgiving!

WHY WE SHOULD BE THANKFUL

Nations, like individuals, have their emotional ups and downs. Everyone can remember a time in his life when all seemed lost. He had no self-respect, no hope, no joy of living. He went through his days like a zombie, making the proper motions without zest. He carried an inert burden of guilt and disgust.

The United States for several years has been in such a "down" time. We all carry the scars of a "lost war which should not have been fought. The highest levels of government have been dishonored by corrupt men. There are no clear voices of leadership. Intellectuals mostly devote themselves to carping, negative criticism. All institutions appear to be faltering. Only crime shows "progress."

So what is there to be thankful for? We can be thankful for what America has been and what America will be again. We should recognize that our nation is in a mood of moral despair and we should say with Lincoln, "This too shall pass."

It is a bit like "catching the second wind." A runner feels that he must collapse, that he can't take one more step. And then suddenly he is strong and

EDITOR'S NOTE: This sonnet, written long ago, is presented in the hope it may have something to say to some of the spiritually troubled young people today. According to legend, King Arthur created the Round Table, an order of knights sworn to uphold justice and peace at home and defend Britain from the barbarians. As in all things human, evil crept in. Queen Guinevere committed adultery with Arthur's best friend, Lancelot. Modred, Arthur's bastard, raised a revolution. After a hard war Arthur was defeated and slain at Land's End. Knights often rode on religious quests in search of the Holy Grail, the chalice from which their Lord drank at the Last Supper.

AFTER LAND'S END

I who saw fire dance on our gabled roofs when other men denied it, being blind, knew what would come, left that doomed town behind and fled to deserts where my horse's hoofs were cut to flints, where wells were alkali, where beast-men knew not Christ. I found my cave. By fast and prayer I studied what to save when all my world was sick and sure to die.

The things I learned I cannot tell unto the men in streets who tap their heads and nod if anyone dares speak to them of God, but this much can I say and it is true: Some who at Land's End saw King Arthur fail fled later to the desert, kissed the Grail.

cism. All institutions appear to be faltering. Only crime shows "progress."

So what is there to be thankful for?

We can be thankful for what America has been and what America will be again. We should recognize that our nation is in a mood of moral despair and we should say with Lincoln, "This too shall pass."

It is a bit like "catching the second wind." A runner feels that he must collapse, that he can't take one more step. And then suddenly he is strong and running better than before.

We can be thankful for what America has achieved in this century. Never has any people done a tenth as much in 75 years.

The physical achievements alone stagger the imagination. Here are a few:

* Two bicycle mechanics launched a motorized box kite. As a result of that day at Kitty Hawk Americans have walked on the moon.

* The horseless carriage slowly replaced the horse, a slow, dangerous and costly mode of transportation. Like all progress, the auto has brought new problems, but it has brought freedom of movement to a nation.

* Television brings instant communication to everyone. The things that are communicated can be improved, but the machine itself is a blessing to millions.

* Power tools at all levels from vast construction projects to the home kitchen relieve workers from the more stultifying forms of toil.

One could go on and on. This list is almost endless. But what of the human condition? Are people happier, healthier and better than they were in the year 1900?

This history of human progress is as dramatic as that of machine progress.

* Life expectancy has steadily increased. Many epidemic diseases, such as smallpox, typhoid and polio have been practically eliminated. Tuberculosis, a major cause of death then, has become increasingly rare. Modern medical achievements would have seemed miraculous to horse-and-buggy doctors.

* Education beyond elementary school was usual-

'Contagious friendliness'

Pledge record tells of loyalty

By MARK CLUTTER

"This church has done beautiful things to my own spirit," said the Condon H. Terry, pastor of the Little Brown Church (First United Presbyterian), Atlantic Avenue and Fifth Street.

"In my past career I have come in contact with many churches of all denominations," he said. "I've known some wonderful churches, but I've never known any church that is better than this."

The people here are the warmest, kindest, most open people I have known. There is contagious friendliness. The spirit is here, the spirit of Jesus Christ. In this church one feels God's presence in a special way.

Pastor Terry, a minister for 25 years, knows more about other churches than many ministers. During his 18-year pastorate in Madison, S.D., he was active in state and national activities of the Presbyterians. He left the ministry temporarily to go into business. His new career included Mainstream, Inc., an organization which helps clergymen of all faiths who leave the ministry.

HE GAVE some almost unbelievable statistics to illustrate the spirit of the Little Brown Church.

Attendance at Sunday School and Sunday worship is 100 per cent of the membership.

Pledges are 125 per cent of the membership.

The pastor explained, "This is a small church, about 200 members. Of course, not everybody can come to church every Sunday, but nonmembers make up for them. And not everybody can make a pledge, but many non-members give to the work, bringing the pledges up to 125 per cent."

The church is working hard to build its membership. Each Sunday a team headed by Cort Johnson goes visiting in a residential area. Team members knock on doors and politely ask people to visit the Little Brown Church. The team is meeting with success. It's dinner time each Wednesday at the church. The meal is cooked in the church kitchen. Now and then housewives contribute something extra, such as pies. Usual attendance is 70 or 80.

There is also a weekly Bible class which is methodically working through the Bible.

The church, like most downtown churches, has its share of older people. But it also has a vigorous youth program. Jack Scott serves as youth minister.

SUNDAY, DEC. 7, will be a big day at the church. It will celebrate its 70th anniversary.

"This church has a sense of history," the pastor said. "There are families of the families that founded the church. There is, however, no one who remembers 1905. Families can be a closed little clique or they can be very open and friendly. These families are open and friendly."

When the church was founded there was a population of 12,000. The city boasted of three autos but no paved streets. The first Little Brown Church was built at the present site. In 1914 a larger church was built. It survived the earthquake of 1933 but became too small. The present building was constructed in 1939. It is believed to be as earthquake-resistant as possible. The concrete is reinforced by steel beams.

The building was white, but Terry insisted when he accepted the pastorate two years ago that it be painted brown in keeping with tradition.

OUTSIDERS often wonder why there are two Presbyterian Churches within two blocks of each other. The reasons can be found in local and national church history.

There were two Presbyterian denominations — the United Presbyterian Church of North America and the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. As a result, Long Beach had two First Presbyterian churches — "Old First," founded in 1888, and First.

The denominations merged to form the United Presbyterian Church.

And Long Beach "Old First" merged with Calvary to create Covenant United Presbyterian at Third Street and Atlantic Avenue.

The Little Brown Church, now belonging to the same denomination, could have easily merged too. But the people didn't want to. This was the church of their fathers and grandfathers. In this church they remembered baptisms and weddings and funerals. This was their home.

PASTOR Terry, a native of New Jersey, was a submariner in World War II. He married "the girl next door." They have eight children. He attended the university and seminary in New York. They went to South Dakota in 1951. Between 1969 and 1974 he was involved in various business activities, including real estate.

Philosophy of weddings

EDITOR'S NOTE: Recently these pages carried brief articles by several pastors on what a wedding should be. Here is another answer.

By REXFORD STYZENS
Minister
Unitarian Universalist Church

I prefer that couples contact me well in advance of their wedding date. I refuse to do weddings for couples who either expect to be married the same day they contact me or who allow insufficient time for us to counsel together and plan the wedding service. I am not reluctant to refuse to do weddings, because I know a couple can always find someone if they just want a person, to read words over them.

In my church the wedding is not treated as a sacrament. The foundation of the marriage is the relationship created by the couple. By the time they come to me, that relationship already exists. The ceremony is a public celebration of the private commitments persons have made in reaching the decision to marry. It is the opportunity to tell their family and friends about that decision and their hopes for the future.

I ask all persons I marry, therefore, to choose the content of the ceremony. My job is to help them speak their feelings. The ideal ceremony is one that is wholly personal in content and created by the couple. As many persons are not skilled in such self-expression, I provide an extensive supply of sample materials to use as models.

I offer premarital counseling and in most cases it is voluntary. In certain cases I insist on counseling, as when the couple is very young. The counseling materials focus on the whole range of family life issues including financial and sexual behavior. I am doing less premarital counseling these days because of the growing practice of couples living together before marriage. That is an old custom that has been rediscovered. As one young man of Scandinavian descent told me, he was only doing what his ancestors had always done. Living together before marriage is an excellent premarital experience, and I feel less of an obligation to counsel such couples.

The style of ceremony can vary from very brief, informal, and spontaneous statements by the bride and groom and guests to a traditional and formal wedding in the Victorian style that somehow has become "standard."

As I attach no reverence to Victorian customing, the dress of bride and groom is a matter of their own choice, and I seldom interfere. I am concerned about the environment for the ceremony. Any place such as a merry-go-round or hot air balloon would prevent a public sharing of heartfelt feelings, and I would not participate in such services.

The fees I charge for non-members who come to me are based upon the time and work involved in preparing and conducting the ceremony. Few people realize how time consuming it can be. A wedding scheduled for the middle of the day prevents me from planning much of anything else for that day. Therefore, the Unitarian Universalist Ministers Association has set a minimum fee of $60 for weddings. When extensive travel is involved that also can raise the fee. Of course, there is no fee for weddings done for members of the church I serve and their families.

The climate in southern California allows persons to plan weddings for the out of doors, and I have performed weddings in parks, on the beach, and elsewhere. These have generally been lovely settings. Weddings are almost always one of the most enjoyable aspects of the ministry.

More books

Religion Editor: I wish I would have had access to a bibliography on the Charismatic Movement similar to the one given in the religion section about a year ago, when I was writing a thesis on the subject.

For those readers who are deeply interested in the Holy Spirit and his work today, but who choose not to be identified with the current Charismatic Movement, it might be helpful to provide a list of books which give helpful information on the Holy Spirit, howbeit without the overtones of Pentecostalism (of course, many books on the list printed in the paper would be helpful to all Christians, whether they identify with the Charismatic Movement or not).

May I suggest ten which I find extremely useful: Brunner, F. Dale. A Theology of the Holy Spirit. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 1970.

Hoekema, Anthony A. Holy Spirit Baptism. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 1972.

Kiyyer, Abraham. The Work of the Holy Spirit. (a classic) Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 1973.

Samarin, William J. Tongues of Men and Angels. New York: Macmillan, 1972.

Schaeffer, Francis A. The New Supernaturalism. Downers Grove, Illinois: InterVarsity Press, 1972.

Walvoord, John F. The Holy Spirit. Grand Rapids: Dunham Publishing Co., 1958.

65 victors

Religion Editor:

I'm sending you this note to thank you for the excellent exposure and publicity that you gave to our last Five-Day Plan. It had high visibility. More than one hundred registered for the Plan and more than half of this number said that they came because they saw it in the newspaper. I think that this should give you a great deal of satisfaction.

You will be glad to know that 65 gained a complete victory over tobacco and most of the others cut down considerably.

Thank you again for the coverage that you gave us.

Larry Kagels Pastor Long Beach Seventh-Day Adventist Church

Thanks

Religion Editor:

I want to thank you for the excellent coverage you gave to First Lutheran Church and our Vietnamese family. Although no one called about housing as a result of the article, we did get several responses regarding employment and another church furnished our family with a lovely set of dishes.

A relative of one of our members has supplied us with a house at a very minimal rent.

Thanks again for your assistance. It was appreciated very much by all of us at First Lutheran.

Review

Bible reads like a novel

THE GOOD NEWS ABOUT JESUS, edited by Frank Dell'isola, Holman, $3.95.

Here is a New Testament that can be read as one would read a fast-paced novel.

Every book lover intends some day to read the Bible thoroughly, but even devout Christians shirk the task. There are so many books, all divided into chapters and verses. The languages of some versions is antique. The Gospels and several books of the Old Testament are somewhat repetitious.

"The Good News About Jesus" solves those problems. The editor has combined and rearranged the New Testament into a single flowing narrative. The language is that of "Today's English Version," also known as "Good News for Modern Man." The prose is excellent — very modern and very clear but also dignified. There are no footnotes or other attention breakers.

This should be a good book for anyone who has not read the New Testament. It is possible that students of the Bible might also enjoy it because it does present a fresh approach.

Of course, something is always lost in editing. The four Gospels tell the same story, but each is distinct and individualistic. To combine them into one narrative loses the varying emphasis of each. After all, Matthew is a very different author from John.

One is even more doubtful about editing the Epistles. (Editor Dell'isola understood this and worked with a light hand.) Paul was a literary craftsman; his Epistles are perfect essays. The Book of Romans, for example, should be read as a whole, and it is almost impossible to delete a single sentence without harming the structure.

This book will not replace New Testaments of standard structure. Its purpose is to give an over-all view of the Christian text-book. You see the New Testament whole.

— MARK CLUTTER

Charismatic

Here is the conclusion of a list of Charismatic-Pentecostal books in the Long Beach Public Library. It was prepared by Joe Kingsley.

53. Walsh, Father V. M., "A Key to Charismatic Renewal in the Catholic Church."

54. Wead, Dennis, "Catholic Charismatics," 282.73 W361c (Main only)

55. Bredesen, Harold, "Yes, Lord," 266 B831y

56. Bennett, Dennis, "Nine O'Clock in the Morning," 231.1 B471n

57. Navarra F., "Noah's Ark, 220.9 N321n

58. Jones, James W., "Filled With New Wine," 262 J77f (Main)

59. Whybray, N. N., "The Book of Proverbs," 223.7 W629b

Non-charismatic books, but worthwhile reading:

60. Belloc, Hilaire, "The Yak, The Python, The Frog," X7b. A picture book for children.

61. Van Doren, Mark and Samuel, "The Book of Praise," 223.2 V246b

62. Johnston, William, S. J., "Silent Music," 291.43 J735

63. Muggeridge, Malcolm, "Something Beautiful for God," 268.54 M951s. A biography of the great Mother Teresa of India who is up for the Nobel Peace Prize this year.

People, ideas

ly reserved for children of middle and upper class families. There was much illiteracy. Higher education is now available to all who seek it.

* Although slavery was officially abolished in the Civil War, the nation continued to be slavery-minded. There were few openings for blacks outside common labor. Now all legal racial restrictions have been removed. Doors are opening. There are even black faces in military high command. The old disgrace of slavery is vanishing.

* Women had few options in 1900. The best was to marry a loving and prosperous man. A respectable spinster might get a job as schoolmarm.

Catholics could enter convents. There was domestic service. The unattached urban poor could work in sweatshops, which often meant tuberculosis, or go into prostitution, which often meant syphilis. Now women are free to do whatever they choose (except to become priests or combat infantry.)

* Everyone is appalled by the rising crime statistics, but it should be remembered that this is not the worst period. Percentage, homicide was much higher in the 1920s and 1930s. And the sciences of crime prevention and detection are infinitely better.

* Statistics about traffic fatalities are shocking, but on the basis of vehicle miles traveled the nation has shown a dramatic decrease in auto accidents. The danger was much greater in 1930.

* Churches in 1900 were mostly tight little sects, each of which believed that it held complete and ultimate Truth and that all the others were in danger of hell. Few believe this today. The sense of brotherhood transcends differences of custom and theology.

This list could go on and on. In almost anything one can think of, times are better than they were in 1900.

Only in one respect was 1900 superior to 1975. Those people had hope, will and ambition. They were determined to build a better society.

The amazing achievements by them and their heirs should be considered, just a beginning.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The Bible course that heals.

The Bible is filled with accounts of spiritual healing — of health restored, lives regenerated, needs supplied. That spiritual power is still active today.

The Bible Lessons in the Christian Science Quarterly, which include citations from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, can help you find this healing truth.

You can buy your own copy of the Quarterly, or study the Bible Lesson in our free public Reading Room.

Rocky warns of extremism peril to GOP

By NEIL MEHLER
Knight News Service

WICHITA, Kan. Vice President Nelson Rockefeller flew to sunny Spain after leaving the Republican Governors meeting in Wichita Friday a message as chilling as the Kansas weather.

The message: Avoid political extremism if the GOP is to survive.

He also warned his former colleagues that federal revenue sharing has only "a 50/50 chance to pass now" in Congress and that they'd better lobby hard to keep it alive. New York City plans for restructuring its financial system hinge on more than $400 million in revenue sharing and the city's fiscal program "will be knocked into a cocked hat" if Congress lets revenue sharing die, Rockefeller said.

Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa suggested that Democrats anxious to help save New York City may be forced to vote to renew revenue sharing, though some of them would not support it if the New York factor didn't exist.

Rockefeller left for the funeral of General Franco in Air Force 2 from McConnell Air Force Base here after having made clear to the governors and newsmen that he considers Ronald Reagan a threat to the future of the GOP.

Though he did not mention Reagan by name on the second day of Reagan's fly-around to announce his challenge to President Ford for the party's 1976 nomination, Rockefeller left little doubt about his target.

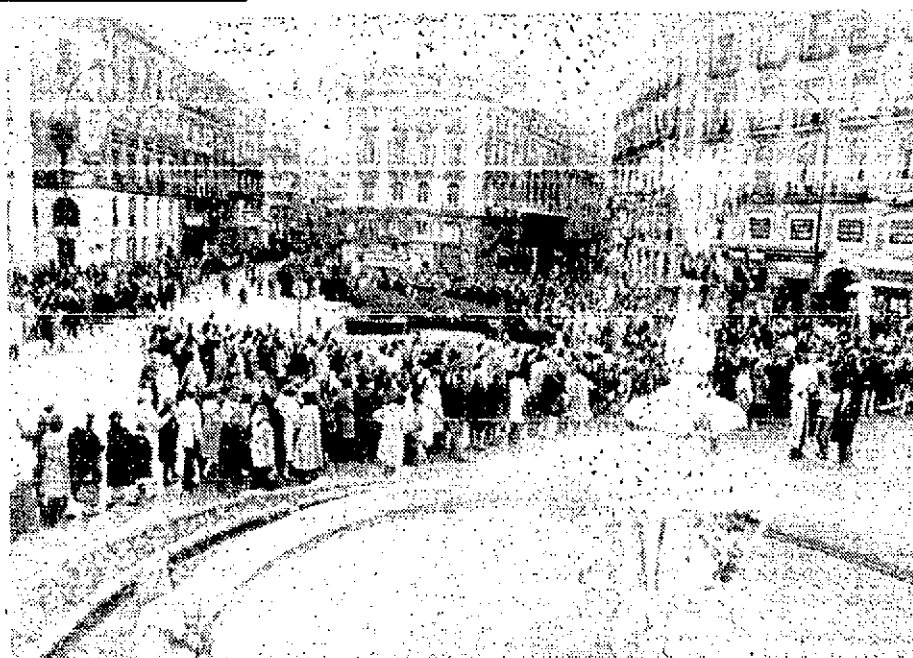

He said, "No American political party can long endure by directing its appeal to a narrow minority — neglecting the opinions, the interests, and the aspirations of the vast majority of the electorate."

He condemned Reagan directly when he arrived in Wichita late Thursday by telling reporters Reagan's proposal to cut the federal budget would simply add financial burdens to state and local governments that already are in fiscal trouble.

Friday he added to his criticism, saying, "It will not serve the nation to have our major parties polarize at ideological extremes."

Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond echoed this theme. Bond, chairman of the 13 Republican governors, said, "I reject, flatly and unequivocally, the odd notion that our party can somehow grow by narrowing its focus and driving good people from its ranks."

Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire, the only governor who is openly backing Reagan over Ford, told newsmen the response to Reagan's announcement of candidacy has been encouraging and that Reagan will win the New Hampshire primary, first in the nation.

curiosity — risking a five-year sentence with a plastic toy gun."

Reagan said it was a "realistic looking" gun resembling a snub-nose .38 caliber.

Among other points in the news conference: He feels congressional investigations have deteriorated our capacity for counterintelligence.

The Equal Rights Amendment "risks endangering some women's rights" and specific inequalities should be remedied by statute, he said.

Asked if Ford is more vulnerable on foreign or domestic issues, Reagan said, "Let the voters decide."

He said he drew "a blank" when queried about his position on Senate Bill 1, the proposed Criminal Justice Reform Act. He pondered, trying to remember the "something that was upsetting" in the bill. "Maybe I've been in the airplane too long," he said. "It will probably come to me as soon as I leave here."

Reagan disputed that there was any extremism in his tenure as governor of California.

After his words of greeting to the welcoming group at the airport, Reagan delivered the same announcement message he has given at each of his stops.

He said he chose Washington, D.C. as the place for his announcement "because it is such an intimate part of our troubles: inflation, recession, unemployment, bureaucracy and centralized power."

While government at all levels absorbs 44 per cent of personal income, he said, "it has become more intrusive, more coercive, more meddlesome and less effective... I am convinced that under the layer of self-doubt that seems to have settled like a fog on our country, the true, strong spirit of the American people still glows, ready to be ignited so that we can once again have a sense of mission, a pride in our capacity to perform great deeds."

Reagan's day began in New Hampshire where

Thursday night he had received his biggest and warmest welcome of the two day trip. An estimated 1,000 residents of that tiny state listened to his speech and then tossed mostly friendly questions at him for 50 minutes.

For Reagan the warm New Hampshire welcome was good news. The nation's first primary is there and he may have a good chance to beat Ford in that primary.

After a morning news conference in New Hampshire Reagan flew first to Charlotte, N. C., and then to Chicago before ending his two day nationwide tour in Los Angeles.

The tour was carefully designed to cover states where Reagan hopes to beat Ford in the spring primaries. He now plans to ease off the campaign trail during the rest of November and December.

Instead Reagan will meet and be briefed by economic, military and international experts as he drafts his campaign plans for the primary battles.

Reagan will resume the campaign trail in early January, planning 15 days in New Hampshire alone.

The first two days of the campaign were a time of testing for the candidate and he seemed to gain strength and confidence as he journeyed.

U.S. sued to stop sea oil leases

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of Southern California cities and counties and the state's attorney general filed separate suits against the government Friday in an effort to block the issuance of offshore oil leases.

Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe and Curtis J. Berkland, director of the Bureau of Land Management, were named as defendants in the suits challenging the government's decision to accelerate oil and gas leasing on the Outer Continental Shelf.

The coalition suit alleged that the leasing would cause "significant environmental damages to beaches, wetlands and other sensitive shore areas," endanger wildlife and pose a threat to "largely uninhabited areas of great natural beauty."

It accused the federal government of "procedural and substantive violations of the National Environmental Policy Act."

Under the government's accelerated program, bids for the first leases — representing some 1.3 million acres off the coast of Southern California — are scheduled to be opened on Dec. 11.

'62 Scott oil fee affirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp.'s former top attorney has testified he halted in 1961 or 1962, over Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott's objections, a $25,000-a-year retainer being paid Scott's law firm.

The lawyer, Royce Savage, said in a deposition filed in U.S. District Court on Friday that he never talked to Scott again and had no knowledge of an alleged $5,000 paid the Pennsylvania Republican in the spring and fall of every year.

Savage, who as general counsel for Gulf from 1961 to 1969 had supervision over the company's lobbying activities, said he did not require an accounting of how Gulf's lobbyists spent money, however.

Savage was a U.S. district judge in Oklahoma before becoming general counsel at Gulf. Since his retirement, he has been in private practice in Tulsa.

He said in a deposition taken by Securities and Exchange Commission lawyers investigating political contributions by Gulf that the retainer arrangement with Scott's Philadelphia law firm — Obermayer, Rebmann, Maxwell & Hippell — was in existence when Savage assumed his post.

Savage said he decided to end the arrangement because "I found that this firm had done very little or performed very little legal service for Gulf."

Savage said he wrote the letter notifying the firm of the proposed termination probably in late 1961 or early 1962, which would have been after Scott had served in the Senate for three years.

The letter prompted Scott to seek an appointment with Savage in the Gulf official's Pittsburgh office, Savage said, where Scott "urged me to continue the retainer arrangement because of his association with the firm."

"It seems to me that he might have asked me to phase it out, possibly reduce it to a smaller figure," Savage testified.

Savage recalled he "may have agreed to the payment of retainer for another year at a lower figure, at which time it would be completely terminated."

Doubts bared on oil-piping studies

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Brown administration said Friday it has serious concerns about federal draft environmental impact studies for piping natural gas from Alaska and oil drilling in the Santa Barbara Channel.

The state Resources Agency, in a letter to the U.S. Department of the Interior, criticized the federal statement for not considering all alternatives to a pipeline to bring Alaskan natural gas to California.

WHILE urging delivery of North Slope gas as soon as possible, the state "finds it difficult to review major energy proposals" without a federal energy program, the letter said.

The draft statement failed to consider a proposed pipeline across Alaska with a tanker route to Southern California, the state said.

The statement "contains little, if any, discussion of this major alternative proposal by El Paso Natural Gas Co., which is yet to be formally considered by the state."

Demos see works pared, not views

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Leading Democrats said Friday they may not have to give up their social philosophies, but they might have to abandon some of their social programs.

"People don't want less government, but they want better government," party Chairman Robert Strauss told the National Democratic Issues Convention.

"THE REAL weakness of our programs has been that once enacted, we haven't evaluated and re-evaluated," Strauss said. "The good hasn't been reinforced and strengthened. The ill-conceived or outgrown hasn't been altered or abandoned."

But Strauss said "we don't quit trying" just because some Democratic programs since the New Deal haven't worked out ideally.

"If a number of social programs have failed... are we going to junk social action?" he asked. "Of course not."

Strauss said the way for Democrats to restore public confidence in the party in particular and government in general is to come up with new programs which work.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis struck the same theme. He said he was not a "crazy puritan," as some have claimed, just because he recognizes "that much of what government has tried to do over the last 15 years has failed.

"WE HAVE not forsaken government as an effective instrument for social and economic change," Dukakis said. "Quite the contrary. We believe that, properly led, government can and must play a major role in managing our economy and creating the preconditions for 'the good life' for all our citizens."

Throughout the first day of their three-day issues convention, Friday, the Democrats were told that people are waiting for bold, new leadership.

"Our people are thirsting for strong leadership," pollster Peter Hart told the National Democratic Issues Convention, "but they are doubtful that they will find any."

"Americans want change, and the Democratic Party cannot expect the voters to put Democrats back in office on the strength of a few newly warmed over 1933 programs," Hart said.

AT THE same time, Keith Haller, director of the sponsoring Democratic Forum, conceded the convention theme "Beyond the New Deal" is still more wish than fact.

"The campaign for 1976 has started pretty much the way it has in the past," Haller said at a news conference. "I would say they (candidates) are probably not at this point prepared to go much beyond the New Deal."

MOYNIHAN

"What do you do with rumors?" he asked. Rolling his eyes over his drink, he "explained" that the U.S. mission had planned to say "some strong things" but then had a change of mind about the way of saying them.

Asked if his statement left the door open for him to resign in the near future (which it did), he replied firmly, "I serve at the pleasure of the President."

That the dispute had not been ended by the telephone conversation between Moynihan and the White House was indicated by the fact that he and Ford are to meet in Washington Monday or Tuesday. Ford sent him to the U.N. in July.

A few hours later Moynihan left to Leonard Garment, another delegate, the task of withdrawing Moynihan's personally sponsored resolution at the U.N. calling for a worldwide amnesty for political prisoners. Garment explained 15 amendments had made the resolution "a travesty upon the pain of political prisoners and on the U.N. itself."

Since the outcry by some of the global body's diplomatic types against Moynihan's style surfaced, the U.S. mission has disclosed that of more than 7,300 letters he has received since taking his post, fewer than 100 have been critical. Moynihan's free-wheeling approach upset foreign diplomats, especially third-worlders, as early as September when the General Assembly went into session and the U.S. delegate began picturing that body in press comments and on TV as an arena where despotic nations were ganging up on the U.S.

Shock waves came from a San Francisco speech in which Moynihan endorsed a characterization of Idi Amin, the Ugandan dictator, as a "racist murderer," and also took the liberty of regretting that Idi Amin was head of the Organization of African Unity.

His extracurricular activities aside, there also are many who thought he was too passionate in attacking the resolution that called Zionism "a form of racism."

Shortly after it was adopted, Moynihan prophesied that despots of the future would justify their actions with "just such distortions of words."

Women equal men in AF applications

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — The number of women requesting information about admission to the Air Force Academy is about equal to the number of men who traditionally request such information, academy officials said Friday.

A spokesman for the academy said it had received appointment requests from 146 women in 37 states and three overseas areas. However, it was not yet known how many young women may have requested appointments directly from their congressmen, he said.

On June 28, 1976, 150 women will be admitted to the academy with the class of 1980. They will be among 1,500 admitted.

the city, offered to pool Long Beach's funds earmarked for the Transportation Center and "people mover," if Long Beach were given top priority in any proposed transit system.

Chapman explained that the approximately $20 million in local funds, when pooled with regional money, would generate about $100 million of combined federal and local matching funds.

The "transit summit" meeting was the second held at the instigation of Gov. Brown, who sought to get local governmental agencies to agree on a transit program so as to take advantage of an estimated $800 million or more available in federal funds over a five-year period.

"This is the first time we ever have actually had money available to do anything toward construction of a transit system," Clark said.

The first "summit" meeting was Oct. 10 in Sacramento, and the participants agreed to have the State Department of Transportation study construction costs and estimated patronage for each of the proposed segments of the system. The state report was made Friday at the closed meeting of the city and county officials.

Chel rips lack of FEPC aid to aged

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, labeled the state's Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC) "totally useless" following the morning session of an all-day hearing of the California Legislature's Joint Commission on Aging Friday in Long Beach.

Chel berated the commission's lack of affirmative action in helping older workers deal with problems of age discrimination in employment.

"Many older persons are virtually forced into poverty when they leave the work force," Chel said. "We must develop options for such people who have the health, ability and desire to continue working."

In the second of two meetings, (the first was held Nov. 7 in San Jose to gather testimony on problems of age and employment) Chel used the adage that "justice delayed is justice denied," citing attorney Michael Gilfix's testimony earlier that "there is a nine-month delay between the time a discrimination complaint is brought before an FEPC commissioner and the time there is action on it."

Gilfix, an attorney with the Senior Adult Legal Assistance service in Palo Alto, testified that the commission often dissuades persons from filing complaints.

"IT'S DEPLORABLE that a person has to file an initial complaint with the commission before the courts will look at a case of age discrimination and employment. And then there's a waiting time of nine months."

"The main problem faced by the Fair Employment Practices Commission is a backlog of complaints to be heard. We have part time commissioners trying to do a full time job," Gilfix complained. "Rather than trying to expand their staff, they're trying to cut down on the number of cases heard."

Commissioners are lay persons appointed by the governor. They are paid $50 a day for listening to complaints of discrimination. Gilfix pointed out that the appointees do not receive specialized training in dealing with the employment problems of older persons — whom the state identifies as anyone over 40.

Since its inception, the commission (which began as a part of the Rumford Fair Housing Act in 1959) has not brought a case of age discrimination to a conclusion in the courts — a fact that Chel said is "unusually hard to believe."

There is one case pending in San Diego.

Sen. Joseph Kennick, a member of the Joint Committee on Aging, charged that the commission is "not facing up to its challenges."

"THE FUNCTION of the commission was to solve the problems brought to it in a reasonable amount of time. I don't think nine months is a reasonable amount of time. A person could starve before then."

Kennick's comments drew applause from about 50 people who were gathered in the Long Beach City Council chambers for the hearing.

Kennick suggested the commission review its record to see what changes could be made, adding that it might be wise to give commissioners full time status.

Speaking for the FEPC, Marston Chavez, a senior investigator, explained the commission's primary function is to hear complaints, noting that the commission receives 30 to 45 new cases per month.

Chavez said after a complaint is brought to one of the seven commission offices throughout the state, the commissioner hearing the case can suggest three courses of action:

—Continue the case;
—Recommend a conciliation conference; or;
—Recommend the case be closed.

Chavez said "administrative difficulties" were responsible for the time delay in getting action on a complaint.

EARLIER, CHEL identified four main issues that came out of the San Jose hearings. They included: the difficulty in enforcing the age discrimination provision of the Fair Employment Practices Act; business and labor's attitudes toward retirement policies; the employment opportunities for older persons through the comprehensive employment training act; and the need for the reinstatement of the older worker program in the state's employment development department.

The Long Beach hearing also entertained discussions on those issues.

The next hearing of the Joint Committee of Aging will be held Dec. 12 at the Los Angeles Convention Center.

Gave first aid to injured friend

Lakewood Scout gets Medal of Merit

EAGLE SCOUT CARL HARTMAN AND HIS MEDAL OF MERIT

Carl Hartman, 13, heard the branch break and saw his friend Christopher Bolt fall from the tree beside the Hartman residence at 3721 Manor Drive, Lakewood.

At first he thought the fall, occurring as Chris climbed to retrieve a ball from the roof of the house, was just another minor tumble, but then he saw blood spurting and heard his friend start to scream.

THE JAGGED end of the broken branch "had ripped the calf of his leg open to the bone," recalls Carl, who immediately put into practice the Boy Scout first aid that had, coincidentally, been taught by his father, Dr. Ronald H. Hartman.

Dr. Hartman instructs the first aid classes of his son's Lakewood Scout Troop No. 209.

Carl's lifesaving action took place on Memorial Day weekend of 1974 and it recently, after much documentation, earned the teen-ager the Scouts' national Medal of Merit.

After dispatching a younger brother, Gregg, into the house for cloths and blankets, Carl calmed Chris, folded back into place the long flap of lacerated flesh that hung from the victim's right leg and applied manual pressure to stanch the gushing blood.

Then he used the first aid materials to fashion a cloth pressure pad and, with his friend's feet elevated, applied a constriction bandage to the wound.

Continuing to reassure the victim that all was well, Carl then rushed to the telephone and called a physician friend of the family—in the process frightening his grandmother, Jean Ball, who was sitting for the boys while Dr. Hartman and his wife, Sylvia, were away.

Carl reassured his grandmother that he was not injured despite the blood on his hands.

THE DOCTOR, who rushed from his own home, took further first aid measures while awaiting an ambulance, but praised the Scout's initial steps.

The young victim was taken to Lakewood Doctors Hospital, where, as Carl recalls, the severe injury required "about 89 stitches."

Written statements from the doctor and from personnel in the hospital's emergency department praising Carl's action had to be submitted for him to receive the medal.

The awarding authority was the National Court of Honor. Carl, who also recently qualified for Eagle Scout rank, received the medal from his scoutmaster.

Parents partly blamed in teen drinking

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Parents who encourage their teen-agers to drink in hopes they'll stay away from drugs may be helping to create a new generation of alcoholics, an alcoholism official said Wednesday.

"The strategy of these parents seems to be working," said Philip Valera, executive director of the South Bay Alcoholism Council.

"Teen-agers have been turning away from drugs and toward alcohol in the last couple of years."

As a result, alcoholism is again becoming the "drug of preference" among young people, and alcohol abuse is on the increase, Valera said.

Valera said he had no statistics to back up the claim, but information from teachers and law enforcement officials shows a clear trend.

"In the last two years there's been a noticeable increase in the number of junior high school students showing up for class under the influence," he said.

Alcohol abuse by young people was one theme of an all-day conference on alcoholism that Valera's organization sponsored recently at Dominguez Hills State College.

The conference was for people in the helping professions who deal with alcoholics — school counselors, clergymen, psychologists, health educators, social workers and law enforcement personnel.

Valera said there were two types of young people who suffer from alcohol abuse — those who use it heavily and those who live in homes where parents drink.

The problems of the first group are well-known, but the difficulties of youngsters in "alcoholic environments" have been largely overlooked, Valera said.

"They are the only ones in their classes who feel they can't invite their friends home because mom or dad is regularly under the influence," he said.

"This isolates them. They tend to withdraw. Many start drinking themselves."

Such teen-agers often turn to alcohol themselves because their own needs are unmet and because their parents give them an example of how to deal with tension — by drinking.

That group of teen-agers forms "a clientele to which virtually no services are offered," Valera said.

He said the alcoholism council was working on a program for schools that would identify teen-agers in alcoholic environments and bring them together to develop friendships that would break their isolation.

"We also want to make available more information on alcoholism to be used in health classes," Valera said. "Youngsters won't feel so bad about their parents' problem if they know it's an illness."

Westminster bus plan with OC transit OKd

Trustees of the Westminster School District have given their blessing to new bus services worked out between city officials and the Orange County Transit District to alleviate school busing problems.

Officials said it will be of particular help to seventh and eighth graders, whose school busing program was canceled this year as an economy move.

The plan will go into effect next March. It provides for service at 30-minute intervals Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. by 10 minibuses and allows for students to ride OCTD routes for a fixed rate of $7.20 a month.

The new system will provide hourly service on evenings and Saturdays, and will link Golden West College, Westminster Community Hospital and the Community Services Center as well as the Westminster schools.

340 pounds of pot seized

Norwalk Sheriff's deputies Friday arrested five men and confiscated 340 pounds of marijuana at a Norwalk house.

Officers said the marijuana had a street value of $60,000 and that the arrests followed a short investigation by narcotics officers.

Booked were Michael Rivera, 28, 12126 Union St., Norwalk, Denegrio Pereda, 36, of Westminster, two Colorado residents and one man from Oregon.

Custom car show at L.B. Arena

The 16th Long Beach Custom Car, Rod and Motorcycle Show which opened a three-day run Friday will display more than 400 vehicles again tonight from 6 to midnight.

The estimated value of the cars on display has been placed at more than $3 million in this, the largest show of its kind

Fire prevention program pays

The Lakewood fire prevention program has instructed some 17,000 school children and 13,000 adults in the past year.

More than that, the fire prevention lectures have drastically cut fire damage in Lakewood, according to county Fire Prevention Inspector Gordon Pearson.

"THE REASON that other cities haven't requested the program is they think it's too expensive," Pearson says, but he adds that the price, $8,500 annually, is more than paid back in the lives and fire-fighting costs saved.

Pearson's presentations can be geared to audiences ranging from preschool youngsters to adults. The program, which began in 1958, "covers everything that is known about fire," he explained.

Included are such subjects as the chemistry of fire, fire causes and personal safety.

DURING THE past year he brought these subjects to 23 schools in four districts.

"We're not there to entertain. We're there to provide information. We offer no fairy tales because fire is real and very dangerous," Pearson said.

For the younger children, Pearson teaches the dangers of matches, fire hazards and home escape procedures.

As the audiences get older, the discussion expands to include a job description of a fireman's duties, the need to preserve watershed in wildlife areas from fire, extension cord dangers, and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Older school audiences are taught fire dangers in the home and electrical appliance safety and are offered career guidance if they are interested in becoming firefighters.

The fire education program has special courses for the handicapped.

Center office opens

Theresa Marino, left, director, welcomes Carmen Perez and Richard Harris to the new Community Development component of the East Long Beach Neighborhood Center at 2626 E. Seventh St. The Office, designed as a resource and information clearing house for low-income residents of the area, opened Friday with a staff of six. Services will include bilingual-bicultural program advocacy, affirmative action development, and neighborhood redevelopment.

Film fun to watch, but unlike Rudy Valentino it's no legend

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Every now and then I see a TV movie I know is rotten but still find fun to watch because it moves quickly, has much ripe dialogue, is highly sentimental and even funny in spots. Such was "Love Story" and such is "The Legend of Valentino," a two-hour TV movie ABC is foisting on American Sunday night. It's what you'd call a hoot movie. You'll hoot at it while enjoying it.

ABC describes the flick as "a romantic fiction based on the life and myth of Rudolph Valentino, the screen's first and most famous male sex symbol." If you don't know who he was, ask Grandma.

THE FILM, written by Mel Shavelson, is a well-constructed yarn about the poor, handsome Italian immigrant who rose to fame and funds in silent films only to die at age 31, at the height of his fame and $500,000 in debt.

The acting is first-rate, with Franco Nero in the title role, Suzanne Pleshette as the cynical, heart-of-gold scriptwriter who gets him started, Judd Hirsch as his cynical, wise-cracking publicity man, and Yvette Mimieux as a fiercely ambitious set designer who married him only to further her Hollywood career, then divorced him.

The opening scene is of Valentino's empty mansion, with Pleshette recalling off-camera the dreams that died with Valentino, including his long desire to have his own orange grove.

The grove bore fruit, she sighs, but "he never smelled the blossoms."

YES, INDEED. Then we get down to the beginning of his career, which starts when Valentino, broke, hungry and with no aim other than survival, tries to burglarize the scriptwriter's home late at night.

She catches him, calls the cops, then changes her mind after the cops rough him up. She's intrigued by this good-looking footpad and she and Hirsch wangle him an acting job that leads to stardom.

Amid the ensuing proceedings are references to Valentino's distress at rumors he was a homosexual, plus such great lines as "this is Hollywood. We all eat dirt here because it pays so well."

Another good line comes from Valentino's studio boss, who, upon seeing a rival studio boss at a party, leaves, snarling, "You wanna know how much I hate him? I'm going home to my wife."

Yeah, it sounds pretty bad. But the scenes are so well-crafted and the acting so crisp you'll still have fun watching this tableau of Hollywood film-flam, sham and bittersweet love.

THE FUN is heightened by a really funny crack scriptwriter Shavelson slips in now and then, such as when an ailing Valentino is besieged in his train compartment by a groupie while on a publicity tour.

She wants to make love; he only wants to be left alone and gently tries to get her to leave. Whereupon she gets hysterical and impugns his virility. The crusher comes when she says his movies stink.

Today's 'Big Games' were never bigger

Ohio St. by 7 Cal tabbed by 2 Oklahoma by 4

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — One more factor has entered the scene for today's Ohio State-Michigan football clash, and it may make Woody Hayes and Bo Schembechler wish the season had started a week earlier.

Despite nearly a month of Indian summer weather, winter edged into the Ann Arbor area Friday, and weathermen say either rain or snow could fall during the game.

"I'd like a fast track but we'll play whatever the weather is," said Schembechler. The winner of the game will get a shot at the national championship and will represent the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl.

The loser will head for the Orange Bowl in Miami. According to the oddsmakers, the loser will be Michigan. The Bucks are favored by seven points.

Ohio State has won the right to travel for the roses in the past three years and this is the first season Big Ten teams have been allowed to compete in a bowl other than the Rose Bowl.

"I feel good about this game," Schembechler said. "I've been through enough of these games that I think I know what it's going to take" to win.

The game follows a week filled with controversy, something which has become almost as traditional as the season-ending clash.

First, there were stories that Hayes and Schembechler—a former Hayes assistant—were just short of mortal enemies. Both men denied there was animosity.

STANFORD (AP) — The annual California-Stanford football battle, known as "The Big Game," has never been bigger.

"It's the first time since 1937 in which both teams still have a chance to go to the Rose Bowl," Cal coach Mike White said, citing the fact which tells the story of today's game which will be played before a sellout crowd of 86,000 at Stanford Stadium.

California ranks as a two-point favorite.

Cal's Bears carry a No. 13 national ranking into the game and have the leading offensive unit in major college football, featuring quarterback Joe Roth, running back Chuck Muncie and wide receivers Steve Rivera and Wes Walker.

Stanford has a five-game winning streak, an offense averaging 30 points a game and last year's Big Game hero, placekicker Mike Langford.

"After that game I was totally incoherent," Langford recalls of the game at Berkeley which Stanford won 22-20 on his last-second field goal from 50 yards.

"I'm curious to see what will happen when I go out for my first kick this time. The entire Cal team knows I'm the one who made the field goal last year," he added.

Quarterback Guy Benjamin, reserve quarterback most of last season as well as this season, passed the Cardinals into position for the field goal attempt. Benjamin won't have to come off the bench today. He took over from Mike Cordova as the starter last week and passed for 243 yards in a 33-30 victory over Oregon.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — It will be like a high-stakes poker game today when Nebraska and Oklahoma collide in the Big Eight's version of the Super Bowl.

The prize for the winner is a trip to the Orange Bowl to test the runnerup of the Big Ten.

For Nebraska, it's a go-for-broke situation. The second-ranked Huskers rejected a Fiesta Bowl invitation in order, as coach Tom Osborne phrased it, "to put all our eggs in one basket."

Both teams had been banking on a Sugar Bowl berth opposite Alabama if they lost today but that spot went to twice-beaten Penn State.

Oklahoma, the defending national champion, is 9-1 and shooting for a share of the Big Eight title with the Huskers, 10-0.

The Sooners, unable to go to a bowl for two years because of probation, have agreed to play in the Fiesta if they are defeated by the Huskers.

The Sooners, who won 28 successive games before a 23-3 upset by Kansas, have been installed as a four-point favorite by oddsmakers.

That's despite the fact that Nebraska has outscored its opponents 343-85, while Oklahoma "only" holds a 295-138 scoring edge over its foes.

Both teams have outstanding defenses and Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer predicts scoring will be in the "moderate range." But he adds he didn't think Missouri would score four touchdowns last week in the Sooners' 28-27 victory.

It's over and out for Wilson, Poly

Foothill edges Wilson

By KEN PIVERNETZ

Staff Writer

Wilson High's first venture into the CIF playoffs in six years nearly produced a big upset Friday night.

Empire League champion Foothill, outplayed the first half, pushed across two fourth-quarter touchdowns to nip the Bruins, 23-17, before an estimated turnout of 6,000 at Tustin High.

The first-round 4-A contest was only 43 seconds away from being decided by the California tie-breaker when Steve Speicher scored on a draw play from six yards out.

Foothill had driven 68 yards in the final 2:55 to set up the deciding points.

It wouldn't be an exaggeration to say the Bruins were "Speicherized" on the winning drive.

Twins Greg and Steve Speicher accounted for all but three yards on the nine-play march.

Greg, a 170-pound tailback and the leading rusher in Orange County this year, contributed a twisting run of 17 yards to the Bruin 33. Two plays later brother Steve, the fullback, caught a pass coming out of the backfield (Continued C-2, Col. 6)

LBSU TARGET: TAKE AWAY THE BIG PLAY

By JIM McCORMACK

Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — San Diego State's "big play offense" so impressed a Long Beach State scout recently that he told 49er coach Wayne Howard:

"Whenever San Diego State gets inside the opponent's 15-yard line it should take two 15-yard penalties so it will have room to operate."

It is the feeling among many coaches that San Diego State's strength—the long pass—may also be its weakness.

Long Beach State will find out tonight at 7:30 when the 49ers and Aztecs conclude their season before an anticipated 45,000 San Diego Stadium on-lookers.

"It is kind of a theory of ours," Howard admits, "that the key to beating San Diego is to keep them from hitting a 'big one.' They have such deep patterns that when they get close to the end zone they run out of operating room."

So why don't they just run the football?

"It's not that simple," Howard counters. "A team that passes exceptionally well, and works on it all the time, isn't going to be as good running the football."

San Jose demonstrated that clearly last week, surrendering 278 middle-of-the-field passing yards but restricting the Aztecs to four yards rushing in a 31-7 triumph.

The 49ers hope to achieve similar success. "We're going to try to stop the run with five guys, three interior linemen and our two linebackers," Howard boldly states.

That tactic doesn't surprise San Diego's Claude Gilbert.

"We'll have to run the football much better this week or we'll be in trouble," says Gilbert. "Long Beach has a fine defense, especially against the pass. We'll have to take some pressure off our quarterback by running the football."

Gilbert's quarterback is Craig Penrose, the No. 1 passer in the nation.

A senior, Penrose has completed 175 of 305 passes for 2,409 yards and 15 touchdowns. The Aztecs rank No. 1 in passing in the country, averaging 60 yards a game more than their nearest rival, California.

"Penrose is a great passer if he has time to throw," says Howard. "We've got to put some pressure on him."

That could prove a problem.

The 49ers are playing the contest without starting tackles Jeff Lyall and Rich Valenzuela.

Two other linemen — Kevin Russell and Ron Kipp — have sore knees and a third, Fred Bryant, has yet to recover from a foot injury.

'No way' Rams will let Knox go to Jets

By RICH ROBERTS

Staff Writer

If Chuck Knox leaves to coach the New York Jets, it will be over the Rams' "dead body."

Ram general manager Don Klosterman, no doubt fearing a disastrous "lame duck" situation as experienced by John McKay at USC, flatly denied any foundation to reports Friday that Knox would quit the Rams after this season to return to the Jets, where he was an assistant coach for four years, 1963-66.

The Jets fired head coach Charlie Winner this week.

The New York Post quoted an "anonymous friend" of Knox as saying, "It's not a good situation for him in L.A. Under Carroll Rosenbloom, you're a loser unless you win the Super Bowl. . . . The Jets are the team he'd really like to coach."

Knox was reluctant to offer even a no-comment but later in the day as the rumors snow-balled he said, "I don't want to go anywhere. Carroll has been great to me. I think I have a good situation here. I'm not interested in pursuing anything else."

Rosenbloom is in Daniel Freeman Hospital in Inglewood recovering from coronary bypass surgery Monday. He will watch Sunday's game via closed-circuit TV.

Klosterman said he had talked Friday to Al Ward, the Jets' general manager, who "called to apologize. He wanted me to know he hadn't talked to Chuck. He told me, 'I know Chuck is happy in the situation he has with the Rams.'"

National Football League teams are subject to severe disciplinary action if they approach personnel under contract to other clubs.

"There's no way we would ever let Chuck go," Klosterman said, "and he doesn't want to go."

"If he did leave, it would be over Carroll Rosenbloom's dead body and over my dead body. There's no possibility of it happening."

Freeman comes off bench to spark Laker victory

By DOUG IVES

Staff Writer

Everyone raves—and rightfully so—about the Lakers' acquisition of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. But one of the best deals they ever made was acquiring veteran guard Don Freeman.

The 31-year-old eight-year veteran of the American Basketball Association continued to be a pillar of strength for the Lakers Friday night, coming off the bench to provide the firepower and the defense to lift the Lakers to a 116-104 victory over Milwaukee.

A Forum crowd of 15,412, second largest of the season, watched as the smooth, quick Freeman scored 16 points in the final period to team with Lucius Allen and Abdul-Jabbar in sparking the Lakers to their eighth consecutive home victory.

The win, their sixth in the last seven games, elevated the Lakers into a virtual first-place tie with Golden State in the Pacific Division. It's been a long time since the Lakers enjoyed that lofty position.

Freeman's contribution cannot be minimized. A starter early in the year when Gail Goodrich was a holdout, he has easily moved into a reserve role without complaining and has still maintained a 16-plus scoring average.

He came off the bench two nights ago to score 21 points in a win over Houston.

Freeman, once an ABA All-Star, played out his option with San Antonio and was contacted by Lakers assistant coach Larry Cregar, who along with Bill Sharman coached him four years ago at Utah.

A picture shooter, Freeman's assets go beyond offense. He is a superior defender and Sharman isn't afraid to bench Goodrich or Allen down the stretch to utilize Freeman's all-around skills.

Hargrove scores 3 touchdowns in 30-18 defeat

By GARY ELLIS

The Dove signified anything but peace Friday night.

Fountain Valley's Chris Dove passed for 192 yards and scored two touchdowns to oust Moore League champion Poly High from the 4-A CIF playoffs, 30-18, at Veterans Stadium before an estimated 10,000 amazed spectators.

Dove, who completed 11 of 15 attempts, was the architect of a well-mixed offensive attack. The Barons, who ran 15 more offensive plays than Poly, mixed short passes, slants, reverses and sweeps to pick up 338 total yards. Dove shared the offensive honors with junior placekicker Steve Steinke, who booted field goals of 32, 37 and 37 yards and converted three extra points.

The loss overshadowed outstanding performances by Poly's Artie Hargrove and Mike Maloney. Hargrove scored three touchdowns, on runs of 80, 7 and 6 yards, completed one of four Poly passes 16 yards and finished the evening with 163 yards rushing, more than half Poly's offensive display (252). But the Rabbits played without regular QB Donald Lonon. Maloney intercepted one pass on the Jackrabbit three and caused a fumble on the Poly two as well as catching a pass for 29 yards.

After two exchanges, Fountain Valley was off to the races. Sophomore Willie Gittens, making his second varsity start,

Keep the ball away from Billy White Shoes

When the Pittsburgh Steelers invaded the jammed Astrodome Monday night for a classic rematch with the Houston Oilers, it will be Terry Bradshaw vs. Dan Pastorini; Joe Green & Co. testing the efficient Oiler pass pocket; Curley Culp bumping heads with Ray Mansfield and the center of the Steeler line and Franco Harris and Don Hardeman continuing their assault on the 1,000-yard mark.

The most important battle will be fought between Bobby Walden, Pittsburgh's veteran punter, and Billy (White Shoes) Johnson, Houston's flashy kick return artist.

Billy White Shoes leads the American Football Conference with an average punt return of 18 yards, going 63, 52 and 83 yards for touchdowns. The 5-9, 170-pound whiz from little Widener College in Pennsylvania has the runnerup spot in AFC kick returns at 28.56 yards. An 81-yard TD runback gives him four scoring kick returns, only one shy of the National Football League record and he has five games remaining to match or better it.

Walden must keep the football away from Johnson on punts. He did an excellent job in their first meeting earlier this month when Billy had only one punt return for 14 yards and the Steelers won, 24-17. Walden punted five times for a 42.7-yard average that afternoon and kicked the ball out of bounds four times—twice inside the 20, once inside the 10 and also out of his own end zone to the Oilers' 43. That earned him a game ball.

INSIDE THE NFL

Detroit's Herman Weaver tried the same tactics against Mr. White Shoes, but allowed one punt to get into Johnson territory and the result was a 52-yard runback. "I've never seen anything like him," said Weaver. "I've never tried to punt away from somebody the whole game. But you have to do something, he gets to the ball so quickly."

HOW DO YOU SPELL consistency? M-I-N-N-E-S-O-T-A. The Vikings are the NFL's lone undefeated team (9-0) and boast a 12-game winning streak. They show six NFC Central titles in seven seasons and hold a three-game lead on their seventh. Three NFC championship trophies adorn the Minnesota offices.

The Vikings are one of the league's most opportunistic teams as well with a positive total each season in the takeaway-giveaway table (interceptions-fumbles recovered vs. passes had intercepted-fumbles lost).

This year they're tied with Detroit at +9 with the Rams and Dallas next at +8. Atlanta (-15) and San Francisco (-10) occupy the cellar spots. The Vikes also rank No. 1 in sacking quarterbacks with 31. St. Louis is the runaway leader in protecting its quarterback, allowing only four sacks.

NOTES AND QUOTES: Looking for an expert on NFL defensive linemen? Contact Ray Schoenke of the Washington Redskins. The 12-year veteran has played four of the five interior line positions (all except center) and is currently camped at left guard. "I've been a starter and I've been a replacement," says Schoenke. "It's a job you have to accept. You've got to know the plays at tackle, guard and center. If you don't like it you should quit. If you don't quit, you've got to be ready for anything." Schoenke explains his fondness for football this way: "It's the pressure and the challenge of having to go out and perform under it. Even if you fail, it's a tremendous feeling. When you win, well, there are very few moments in a man's life when everything comes together like that." Cincinnati wide receiver Isaac Curtis has an ankle sprain and the Cleveland Browns' secondary is rejoicing. The former California and San Diego State star has averaged 22.9 yards for each of his 20 receptions in five outings against the Bengals. Three times he's gone over the 100-yard mark in reception yardage...Floyd Little is the ninth runner in NFL history to gain more than 6,000 career yards and he has some definite thoughts about making it in pro football. "The guys that really want to make it are the guys who are volunteering for the special teams, volunteering to lead practices, volunteering to do extra little things. Most people are trying to get something out of life instead of giving. They'd better realize they had the option of not playing this game. The old American dream is gone. Everyone wants the other guy to work and then share his success. When I leave this game nobody owes me anything. These guys worrying about pensions bug me. I'm going to be 33 years old when I retire at the end of this season and I've got 32 years of work ahead of me."

Former UCLA linebacker Fred McNeil will start for the Minnesota Vikings against San Diego Sunday, replacing the injured Ray Winston at left linebacker. One-time New York Giants defensive back Pete Atkeson is being given a tryout to replace injured Jeff Wright with the Vikes. Denver placed defensive tackle Pete Duranko on irrevocable waivers Friday. Veteran Len Dawson is expected to take over for injured Mike Livingston at quarterback for Kansas City against Detroit. Dawson is getting the call over former Sun signal caller, Tony Adams, "because of Dawson's experienced background," says coach Paul Wiggin. "Detroit is a wild team and we feel that with his experience he can beat them. It really gets down to that." Cincinnati leads the NFL in Johnsons with Bob at center, Essex in the backfield and Ken at defensive left end. Both Bob and Essex are original Bengals from the 1968 draft. Ken came a year later after being cut by Dallas. Browns' coach Forrest Gregg and NFL head linesman David Hawk were co-captains at SMU 20 years ago. Gregg was all-Southwest Conference and Hawk became an academic all-American.

CAL—

Cal, Stanford and UCLA share the Pacific-8 lead with 5-1 conference records. Since the Bruins beat both Cal and Stanford, they'll get the Rose Bowl invitation if they beat Southern California next Friday night at the Coliseum.

"I think the Big Game will be for the Rose Bowl," says Stanford linebacker John Olenchak, ready to become a red-hot Trojan fan for a week if Stanford wins today.

Cal's Roth is the most productive quarterback in college ball right now, producing eight touchdowns and 872 yards passing in the last three games. Rivera, the nation's second leading receiver, has 38 catches in the last four games, and Muncie has rushed for 1,294 yards.

"Our defense, especially, will be challenged this week," says Stanford coach Jack Christiansen.

The Cards' defensive unit, led by end Duncan McColl's 18 tackles, played its best game two weeks ago in a 13-10 victory over Southern Cal. Last week it allowed Oregon 360 yards, including 283 passing.

Middle guard Paul Vonder Mehden and linebacker Phil Heck have been standouts for the Cal defense, which has played very well over the last half of the season.

Pass defense could be the key for both teams. Both Roth and Benjamin have completed well over 50 per cent of their passes and allowed very few interceptions.

Then, with help from dethroned champion Southern Cal next week, either the Cal or Stanford defensive players can start concentrating on how to stop the powerful running game of the Big Ten champion, Ohio State or Michigan, in the Rose Bowl.

OKLA.—

Although much has been made of Oklahoma's propensity for fumbling—the Sooners had nine turnovers in the loss to Kansas—Osborne isn't expecting any gifts.

"We've all heard that Oklahoma fumbles a lot, but you look at their key games, big games on their schedule like Texas, Oklahoma State and Missouri, and they didn't turn over the ball in those games. They played well against the people they had to," Osborne said.

"It'll be the best against the best," he added. "I'm not even going to predict a victory. I will predict there will be a 100 per cent effort on our part."

The Oklahoma Wishbone features halfback Joe Washington, whose 71-yard TD run and three-yard conversion plunge derailed Missouri. The Sooners, who are averaging 312 yards rushing per outing, are ably guided by senior quarterback Steve Davis. Other big threats include halfback Elvis Peacock, split end Tinker Owens and speedster Horace Ivory, who is hobbled and will play behind Jim Littrell at fullback.

Behind quarterback Vince Ferragamo, the Huskers are leading the Big Eight in total offense with a per game average of 422 yards.

KNOX—

Rosenbloom's son Steve, the second-ranking Ram executive, was not disturbed by the report.

"My first reaction was, well, anytime a coach is fired, there are a lot of rumors and, second, if it's in New York you're going to have more rumors because of all the media there."

"I can say this about C.R.'s feelings on Chuck: C.R. has had a knack for picking assistant coaches who become exceptional head coaches, and Chuck is of the same nature as these other men. But he's also gone past C.R.'s expectations not only as a coach but as a person. There is not a more loyal, a better-rounded or a better human being than Chuck Knox."

After his initial 12-2 season in 1973, Knox's three-year contract was extended another three years but Steve Rosenbloom was vague on financial terms.

"C.R. has a reputation for doing what is right, and their relationship is such that money is not a factor with Chuck. Chuck is not concerned about his contract or interested in going anywhere else."

The Post's informant also said that Don Shula was "on the verge of being fired" by Rosenbloom after losing the Super Bowl to the Jets when he accepted the job with the Miami Dolphins.

"Nobody likes to lose," Steve Rosenbloom said, "and C.R. is as much a competitor as anybody. But Chuck Knox the person is not going to be a loser in C.R.'s eyes."

Cerritos host to 'new look' Grossmont club

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

There's a new look to the Grossmont College football team this year. Unfortunately for the Griffins, new is not always better.

At this time last season Grossmont was wrapping up the Mission Conference title and on its way to the Division II state championship, which it won by a 34-17 verdict over Orange Coast.

This year Grossmont joined the South Coast Conference. Last week's 42-16 loss to Orange Coast, in what was expected to be a title tilt, only served to drop the Griffins into the cellar. Life in the SCC hasn't been pleasant for Grossmont, as is evident by its 1-4 conference and 4-5 overall record.

However, when the Griffins invade Cerritos College tonight for a 7:30 season finale the Falcons won't be taking anything for granted, especially in light of their own 2-3 conference mark (4-4 over-all) and two-game losing skid.

Still, the question remains: What happened to Grossmont?

"Grossmont has suffered in that it is playing most of the teams in this conference for the first time," said

Cerritos coach Ernie Johnson. "Of course, luck and bad breaks are also factors in this game and Grossmont has lost some close decisions. It has done well both offensively and defensively and actually is a good team."

Statistically, Johnson's prognosis is sound. The Griffins are among the conference's best offensively with an average of 326.6 yards per game and are surrendering 304 per contest. It has suffered losses of one, two and four points.

"Grossmont lost a tight one (25-24) with San Diego Mesa, a team we barely beat, and beat Santa Ana (10-3), which we couldn't move a lick against," Johnson noted.

Although both teams have been out of title consideration for some time, Johnson sees the game as an important one.

"This is the first time we have played Grossmont and it's important to impress them," he said. "By winning our last game we get our freshmen in a positive state of mind for next year when we open against Grossmont."

LBCC, East L.A. in Metro title bout

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

Nearly a year ago East Los Angeles Junior College was fighting its forced entrance into the Metropolitan Conference. Tonight against Long Beach City College it will be fighting for the conference football championship.

Late last season East L.A. officials threatened suit to stop the move by the California Community and Junior College Association that transferred the Huskies from the Southern California Conference into the Metro. Now, after all the fighting has ceased and the football season is nearly three months old, the defending state champion Huskies have a shot at the Potato Bowl if they beat the Vikings in tonight's 7:30 encounter.

Although only one game remains, the road to the championship is muddled for the Huskies. Two other teams, including Long Beach, have a shot at the title. In the best position is Valley College, a team that earlier in the year figured to finish where it has almost every year of the past 20—at the bottom.

No matter what the result of the East L.A.-Long Beach clash in Los Angeles, Valley can wrap up its first Metro title since 1955 and finish with its best mark since then with a home win against El Camino. The possibilities that any of the three might gain a bowl berth has created quite a stir around the conference.

If there hasn't already been enough controversy surrounding East L.A. consider:

- A Valley win combined with an East L.A. victory would create a two-way tie for the crown, although Valley would represent the conference in the Potato Bowl, having defeated the Huskies last week 42-17.

- A Valley loss and an East L.A. win would give the Huskies the title outright with a 5-1 record.

- A Valley loss and a Long Beach win would throw the race into a three-way deadlock and force a vote of conference officials to determine the bowl representative.

NORSE NOTES: Rumors about Jacobson's successor continue to circulate. Word has it Poly's Mike Scarpese is interested in the job...El Camino's 42-14 loss to Bakersfield was the first defeat by the 'Gades since 1970 and only the second time in ten years the school has lost two in a row. Bakersfield entered the game with a two-game losing streak...If the conference ends in a three-way tie the one vote that East L.A. won't get belongs to Pasadena. ## BATTLE OF BIG 10—

Then Schembechler led his coaches into an apartment building near the michigan stadium where his team was practicing to confront a photographer taking forbidden pictures of the workout. Police confiscated the film but plan to return it at halftime today.

As anticipation heightened, scalpers have been advertising hard-to-get tickets for as much as $100 each.

Hayes calls Schembechler's maize and blue boys "more explosive" than in the past, but adds, "I'm not scared of anything."

"I hope we kill them," added Ohio State kicker Tom Kaban, who booted four field goals to win last year's game for the Buckeyes, 12-10.

Schembechler said injuries will be a key factor. "When you lose an outstanding player, the chances of replacing him with equal talent are slim," he said.

A record crowd of 105,000, plus a national television audience, is expected to watch the clash.

OHIO STATE, 10-0 overall and 7-0 in the conference, is ranked No. 1 nationally. Michigan, 8-0-2 and 7-0, is No. 4.

The teams have dominated the league since 1967.

Ohio State was conference champion in 1968. The rivals shared the title in 1969. Ohio State won in 1970, Michigan in 1971, and they have shared it the last three years.

Aside from the weather, Hayes and his Buckeyes will have to contend with the Wolverines' formidable home winning streak of 41 games.

Hayes calls the clash "the greatest rivalry in college football. Our season boils down to this game, and that is just the way it should be."

Lakewood, Wilson and Millikan advance

Lakewood, Wilson and Millikan advanced in the CIF Southern Section water polo playoffs Friday with easy victories.

The Lancers received five goals from Dave Wawrzynski and four from Paul Patuskas in a 14-6 win over LA Habra.

The Lancers broke open a close game in the second quarter with a seven-goal outburst.

Wilson goalie Bill Holford was forced to make only three saves in the Bruins' 11-1 victory over Anaheim.

Randy Kalbus and Matt Riley provided the scoring punch. Kalbus netted five goals and Riley added two as the Moore League champs advanced into the second round.

Millikan built a 5-2 half-time lead over Muir before clearing the bench in

The last four games in the series have been defensive struggles. Ohio State has tallied a total of 43 points, Michigan 41.

Michigan's defense must contend with Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin. The senior tailback has 31 consecutive regular season games with more than 100 yards rushing and has rushed for a record 5,450 yards in 44 games, including three Rose Bowls.

Board play forces Jones to start accurate 'guns'

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Dwight Jones thinks he has found a way to solve half of the rebounding problems his undersized Long Beach State basketball team faces this season.

"If we shoot like I think we're going to, that will eliminate rebounding at one end of the court," Jones declares.

Does that mean the 49ers will start five of the fastest and most accurate "guns" in the West?

"We have the potential to be an exceptional shooting team," Jones says.

The second-year 49er coach has felt that way since basketball practice began Oct. 15. The play of sophomore Larry Hudson has buoyed Jones' optimism.

"I'm really happy with the way Larry has progressed," Jones says. "I don't think many people understand the severty of the surgery Larry had on his wrist.

"From a layman's standpoint it might not have been critical, but from Larry's position, as an athlete and a basketball player, it was."

Hudson broke a small bone in his wrist during his freshman season at Long Beach when he banged his hand on the backboard while grabbing a rebound.

Hudson played the 1974-75 season with the injury and had surgery last summer. Then, a week after fall practice began, more surgery was required to remove a metal staple.

Hudson has rebounded from the surgery and is now shooting with the accuracy that earned him all-America honors as a prep sensation at Jordan High School.

Hudson's restored shooting touch will be on display Tuesday night when the 49ers play their annual intrasquad game in the campus gym.

The 7-30 contest pits the Veterans against the Newcomers. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for LBSU and high school students.

Joining Hudson on the Veterans' squad will be Glen Gerke, Richard Johnson, James Dawson, Dale Dillon, Ron Austin and Sterling Gelkey.

The Newcomers will feature redshirt Lloyd McMillian, Dan Marques, Anthony McGee, Clarence Ruffen, David Goss, Andre Royal and Jon Stradford.

There's more practice ahead.

The 49ers have already drawn 38 days of practice and they'll have another nine before they open their season in the Long Beach Arena against L.A. State.

"We're starting the season a week later than everyone else," Jones concedes, "but I don't know if it will be an advantage or a disadvantage.

"It's a disadvantage because I.A. will have played twice before our game, but it will be to our advantage because the kids are sure to be excited about playing their first game."

Six weeks of practice have done little to alter Jones' pre-season evaluation of his team.

"We're set on four starters—Johnson, Dillon, Hudson and McGee," he says. "I'm not totally set on our post player, though. I think it will be Ruffen, but if not, Dawson will start."

As it has been since drills started, the post is Jones' biggest concern.

"Our biggest question-mark is going to be defending the big post man, the guy everyone is going to go to inside," says Jones. "So far our post defense has been very erratic."

Ruffen remains the key.

"Clarence is progressing about the way I thought he would," says Jones. "He is very inconsistent in his rebounding and his defense, but he is shooting very well and he can run like a deer."

"We're going to have a season of inconsistent play from him until he gets acclimated to this level of competition."

TICKETS ON SALE

Season tickets for Long Beach State's 12 games in the Long Beach Arena are on sale.

Floor and loge level seats are $36, with balcony locations going for $24.

The 49ers play all of their Pacific Coast Athletic Association clashes in the Arena and also have non-league games with L.A. State (two), Wichita State, Colorado, UC Santa Barbara and Hawaii on tap.

State road panel OKs 34 projects

From Our State Bureau

SAN BERNARDINO — The State Highway Commission Friday approved 34 Los Angeles County projects estimated to cost $55 million as part of its 1976-77 budget.

The projects, including work on the Artesia Freeway between the Long Beach and San Diego freeways to provide easier access to vehicles carrying more than one person, are part of an overall $843 million state highway budget.

Or the $843 million, state Transportation Director Sid McCausland said, $436 million is for construction, including $240 million for the building of 77 miles of new freeway and $196 million for rebuilding and upgrading existing highways.

The Artesia Freeway job will be the first phase of what the highway commission calls its "high-occupancy vehicle project." It will include the installation of ramp controls and the restriping of lanes, at an estimated cost of $2.8 million.

Similar projects on the San Diego Freeway between Carson and Seal Beach, costing $3.6 million, are awaiting final environmental approval. The money is included in the 1976-77 budget, however.

Also in the budget is $210,000 for installation of earthquake safety features on the Vincent Thomas Bridge.

Omitted from the budget, however, are funds for construction of a San Diego Freeway interchange to serve Carson. Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, had joined with Carson officials in urging inclusion of the interchange project.

Food ads pushing nutrition boosted

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Advertising for California farm products should stress nutrition instead of taste, a Department of Consumer Affairs official said Friday.

Ruth Yannatta, assistant to the department's director, said such a nutrition emphasis could provide lasting benefits for both consumers and growers.

Ads stressing the nutritional benefits of fresh fruits and vegetables would encourage consumers to permanently alter their diets by eating fewer "junk foods," she said.

Such commercials could also set standards for other advertising, Mrs. Yannatta added.

"If we make good ads with lots of information, that can set a standard for the rest of the advertising industry to follow," she said in an interview. She criticized ads that emphasize simply how good a product tastes or use beautiful women to lure customers.

Mrs. Yannatta was one of four panel members who heard testimony Thursday and Friday about advertising by California's agricultural marketing orders.

The hearings were called by Tim Wallace, director of the Department of Food and Agriculture.

Some television commercials for California farm products shown at Friday's hearing stressed the good taste of a product, but others emphasized the nutritional benefits.

Mrs. Yannatta said one of them, which characterized raisins as "nature's candy," was "really excellent."

Wallace said the hearings bolstered his opinion that market order advertising was needed.

L.B. State's 'boxing team' takes on vet Lewis tonight

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Not long ago Hedgemon Lewis was complaining about a lack of activity. Suddenly he may have more than he can handle.

The two-time welterweight title challenger takes on the Long Beach State boxing team—otherwise known as Carlos Palomino—at the Olympic Auditorium at 8 tonight.

Also, without Lewis' prior knowledge, Eastern representative Eddie Futch arranged for him to meet one Harold Wester Dec. 12 at Madison Square Garden.

By that time, Lewis might have retired.

"There's no doubt a loss to Palomino possibly would mean the end of the trail for me," Hedgemon says. "Let's face it—I've been boxing 10 years. I've fought for the title twice and I'm 29 years old."

Jackie McCoy, who manages Palomino, considers Lewis to be a serious obstacle to his fighter's ambitions.

"I really think the guy is still one of the best two or three welterweights in the world. People remember that fight against (Jose) Napoles on TV. He could have beaten Napoles, but when you go into that altitude at Mexico City, anything can happen, as Armando Muniz can tell you."

Lewis is ranked eighth by the World Boxing Council and Palomino was rated only 14th in the latest release.

But McCoy says, "I believe he'll probably be in the ratings after this fight. We got a call from the WBA (World Boxing Association) wanting his picture and some stuff, and the WBC seems more interested."

"He's ready to make his move. If he gets by Hedgemon, we'll be looking for top-rated guys—but I know we'd never go to fight Napoles in Mexico City."

Palomino, 26, has won 18, lost 1 and drawn 2. The Westminster fighter has stopped 10 opponents.

Lewis, 29, is 56-6 with 26 knockouts but lacks the punch of a true knockout threat.

He would like a third chance at Napoles' title, but says, "If I lose to Palomino there's no way."

Odds are even.

The fight will precede the TV feature at 9 o'clock between No. 6 lightweight Tury Pineda (25-6, 22 KO) and Claude Durden (12-4, 9 KO).

Pearson becomes a pole-sitter

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

ONTARIO — David Pearson and Buddy Baker shattered the Ontario Motor Speedway track record for Grand National stock cars Friday during the first round of qualifying for Sunday's Ontario 500.

Pearson, driving the '73 Ford, shattering the record set by the famous Wood Brothers crew, won the pole position for the $152,050 race when he toured the 2.5-mile oval in 58.622 seconds for an average speed of 153.525 mph.

Baker, winner of the Dixie 500 at Atlanta two weeks ago, put his Norris Industries '74 Ford on the outside of the front row with a time of 58.662 seconds and an average speed of 153.421 mph.

Foreman prepared for ring return

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — "I've only had him about a month," Gil Clancy, trainer of George Foreman, said Friday, "but he's looking strong, working hard and has good confidence."

The former heavyweight champion, who arrived here for his 10-round bout against Jody Ballard of Houston Wednesday, boxed four rounds against two sparring partners.

of 153.217 mph was set three years ago by A.J. Foyt, when he was the regular contract driver for the Wood Brothers. Now driving an independently-entered '75 Chevrolet, the three-time Indianapolis 500 winner posted the day's fifth fast time with a speed of 151.890 mph, good enough for the inside pole of the third row.

Ahead of him in the second row are Dave Marcis (153.136 mph) in a '74 Dodge, and defending Ontario 500 champion Bobby Allison (152.601 mph) in a '75 Matador.

Fifty-four cars attempted to qualify for the first 10 spots available Friday. Thirty more positions will be filled today when qualifying rounds continue from 1 to 4 p.m. The track will be open for practice, starting at 10 a.m.

The Ontario 500, the 30th and final race on this year's Winston Cup Grand National calendar, will be flagged away Sunday for an 11 a.m. start.

Moynihan nearly quits U.N.; Ford intercedes

By JOSEPH EGELHOF
Knight News Service

NEW YORK—Angered by criticism from foes inside the State Department and a British-led move to change his outspoken style, Daniel P. Moynihan came within minutes of quitting as chief American delegate to the United Nations Friday but reportedly was talked out of it by President Ford.

The sudden fracas was screened by evasive words, but it raised the question of whether not only Moynihan's diplomatic ways but also the United States policy of bluntly confronting its opponents at the U.N. was being reassessed.

A White House spokesman, stating that Moynihan had not resigned, added that "the President has full confidence in Ambassador Moynihan and he fully approves what he is doing at the U.N."

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's attitude remained uncertain. Sources in Washington said the policy Moynihan has been carrying out has been Kissinger's own, but that the secretary must be paying attention to criticism of Moynihan within his department.

Within the State Department, the former Harvard professor is regarded by some as uncontrollable. He is a Democrat said to aspire to run against Sen. James Buckley, R-Con, of New York.

The dispute came to a head Monday when Ivor Richard, chief delegate of Britain, addressed the board of directors of the United Nations Association, saying he himself spent his time "preventing rows at the United Nations, not looking for them." He didn't name Moynihan, but his target became clear in the next sentence:

"Whatever else the place is, it is not the O.K. Corral, and I am hardly Wyatt Earp."

The attack was said to stem from the Britain's fear that Moynihan was weakening the U.N.

Moynihan quipped after the speech, "Wyatt Earp didn't do so badly."

Friday morning the U.S. mission called an "important" press conference for Moynihan for 12:30 p.m. On time, the assembled correspondents heard

Moynihan's press officer announce that Moynihan was canceling the conference. The press aide declined to say what the conference had been called for or why it was canceled.

But he said Moynihan had instructed him, in case anyone asked about rumors he was resigning, to say: "Everyone leaves eventually but I have no statement to make today."

Moynihan was found at the Delegates Bar on the same floor of the U.N. a couple of minutes later.

L.B.-L.A. transit link wins approval

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

The first segment of a proposed Los Angeles County rapid-transit system to be built will be a line from Long Beach to Union Station in downtown Los Angeles, according to an agreement reached Friday at a "transit summit" meeting in Los Angeles.

Mayor Thomas J. Clark, who represented Long Beach at the meeting, said it was also agreed that the "starter line" of the system will run from Long Beach to Canoga Park.

The agreement, which must be ratified by the respective governing bodies, was approved by Clark, Supervisors James Hayes and Baxter Ward of Los Angeles County, Los Angeles Mayor Thomas Bradley and Los Angeles Councilman John Ferraro, chairman of its ad hoc committee on rapid transit.

It will be submitted Tuesday, to the Long Beach City Council, Clark said.

"This will insure our Transportation Center and will give us transit service to and from Long Beach," the mayor said. "It's a real boost for the city."

Art Chapman, transportation coordinator for the city, said that if all governmental bodies approve the agreement, construction on the Long Beach-Union Station line could begin in 1977, and be completed in 1983.

The 25.7-mile line would be above ground as far as the Los Angeles Coliseum, and then would go underground to Union Station. The state report estimated the cost at $850 million.

Some weeks ago, Clark, on behalf of

'Cal., how sweet it is,' Reagan tells greeters

By BOB HOUSER &
GIL BAILEY
Staff Writers

Ronald Reagan closed his two-day presidential announcement tour Friday at Hollywood-Burbank Airport with a slightly hoarse but euphoric sigh, "Home in California! How sweet it is!"

Some 500 sign-bearing partisans cheered Reagan and his wife, Nancy, as they deplaned from a Northwest Orient 727 jet shortly after 4 p.m. to mark the end of the five-state mission of announcing his candidacy to oppose President Ford for the Republican nomination.

Noting friendly and familiar faces in the crowd, Reagan said the task doesn't look as big as it did a few hours earlier as he flew across the country.

At a news conference after the airport reception, Reagan revealed an apparent source of his confidence in undertaking the presidential run — his success with California voters.

Queried about liberal Sen. Charles Percy's assessment that Reagan has a "narrow constituency" and that his candidacy would be a "disaster" to the party, Reagan said he considers California to be "a clear microcosm of the United States."

He pointed to his two terms as governor even though the GOP was outnumbered three to two. "If that's narrow, California is different from what I think it is."

Reagan said he was "at a loss" about the disaster reference because, he said, Percy had a letter hand-delivered to Reagan, accepting the candidacy in good faith and "what seemed to be good will."

He disclosed that Ford assured him of his own intentions to conduct a nonpersonal campaign when Reagan called the President Thursday to advise him of his decision to run.

Reagan referred to California again when a newsman asked the basis of his estimate that he would have broad appeal across the country. He said he had been well-received in "some 30-odd states before a great variety of audiences and I don't think we're all that different in California."

He promised to take California's GOP 11th commandment into other states as he campaigns, not "speaking ill of another Republican."

He said he would do "nothing to divide or weaken the party or to lend comfort and aid to Democratic opponents in the election to come. And I make this promise to myself — not to weaken or water down my beliefs for any supposed political advantage. I will say what I think and believe."

Asked his reaction to the toy pistol incident in Miami Thursday in which 20-year-old Michael Carvin pointed the gun at Reagan, was immediately seized by Secret Service agents and later arraigned on charges of intimidating a presidential candidate and assaulting a federal officer, Reagan said his reaction was one of "great

No more murder plots

Ford plan would curb CIA

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — The White House, in its first reaction to the Senate Intelligence Committee assassination report which President Ford tried to suppress, said Friday that the chief executive is working on a plan to prevent any CIA murder attempts in the future.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen, who said Ford was not going to judge past activities, declined to discuss the plan. But Ford is expected to adopt many recommendations made by the Rockefeller Commission last June.

Ford has already moved to implement one commission recommendation — that the CIA director be chosen from outside the agency. He has nominated

George Bush, U.S. envoy to China, to replace William Colby, a career spy.

Nessen said Ford "absolutely abhors government officials being involved in those kinds of things."

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, visiting Capitol Hill to testify behind closed doors about CIA covert operations, insisted that he was "positive" U.S. assassination plotting can be stopped.

The committee report said that the CIA tried to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and the late Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba, as well as supporting coups against several other foreign leaders.

Kissinger said there should be tighter congressional control over intelligence operations but rejected the suggestion that covert operations be taken from the CIA and given to some other agency.

But Kissinger refused to discuss his own role in the Nixon administration program to stop Marxist Salvador Allende from becoming Chilean president in 1970. Although he has testified in secret sessions of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Kissinger said that "I do not believe a secretary of state should testify in public about covert operations."

Kissinger has told the committee that he rejected a CIA plan to organize a Chilean coup. Richard Nixon, interviewed in the latest issue of Ladies Home Journal also insisted: "We had nothing to do with Chile or Allende."

But CIA officials have testified that Nixon and

Kissinger were putting heavy pressure on them to overthrow Allende. Gen. Rene Schneider, Chilean army chief of staff, who objected to a military coup, was killed in a bungled kidnap attempt, but the Senate report said there was no indication U.S. officials ordered Schneider's murder.

Nessen said there is nothing in the report that suggests that Ford fire Kissinger or former CIA Director Richard Helms, now U.S. ambassador to Iran.

Sen. Frank Church said Friday he believed the Senate would support legislation for strong Congressional oversight of the intelligence agencies and would take action "before Easter."

In a telephone interview with the New York Times

Service, the chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence said he based this assessment on the manner in which his colleagues received the committee report on assassination plots against foreign leaders at a closed session of the Senate Thursday.

"The mood was toward the affirmative," he said, in support of the need to correct abuses outlined in the 347-page report. The intelligence committee found that U.S. officials had "instigated" plots to kill two foreign leaders and had supported or known about coup d'etats that resulted in the deaths of three others. It found no evidence, however, that the Central Intelligence Agency had carried out any assassinations.

FBI pushed sex controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI tried to stir up a controversy over free love at the University of Texas as part of the bureau's counterintelligence program against the New Left, according to Senate Intelligence Committee documents.

In an August 1968 memo to his agent in charge at San Antonio, the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover approved a proposal to forge an anonymous letter from a purportedly irate parent protesting an allegedly lax attitude by the university toward sexual permissiveness.

ENCLOSED with the letter would be a clipping of a news story that appeared in the San Antonio Light with the headline "Free Love Comes to Surface Around UT-Austin."

The letter was to be sent to Texas state Sen. Wayne Connally, brother of then-Gov. John Connally, and to Frank Erwin, chairman of the university's board of regents.

The anonymous parent, "who was considering sending his son or daughter to the university ... could protest such activity at a state-supported university," according to the proposal made by the San Antonio agent.

In approving the proposal, Hoover said that "such a communication may be of value in forcing the university to take action against those administrators who are permitting an atmosphere to build up on campus that will be a fertile field for the New Left."

The documents released by the committee Thursday do not disclose whether the anonymous letter ever was sent or what effect it had on university administrators.

"IF WE CAN 'nip this in the bud' it could prevent the development of another New Left such as that at Columbia University," Hoover said.

N.Y. tax-hike vote put off; U.S. aid bid stalls

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Legislature put off action on $200 million in New York City tax increases for the third straight day Friday, further delaying a move which is designed to win federal help to avoid the city's default.

The Legislature, having broken a two-day partisan deadlock on the tax increases, had been expected to act on the measures late Friday night or early this morning.

But legislative leaders decided to send their members home and have them come back this morning to consider the tax increases, which will hit personal income, estates, banks, cigarettes, haircuts, beauty parlors, massage parlors and weight-reducing salons.

The leaders said earlier they had enough votes to pass the taxes bills, but they decided about 11 p.m. to put off action instead of waiting for the New York City Council to pass resolutions asking for the tax hikes.

A spokesman for Gov. Hugh Carey said the Legislature also would get a bill that, in effect, cuts the pay of city employees by $42 million over the first six months of 1976 by forcing them to pick up what the city has been contributing to their pension fund.

State officials meanwhile, remained optimistic that a $150 million financial arrangement would be completed to help the city avert default next week.

"There doesn't seem to be any problem on the $150 million," said a spokesman for the Municipal Assistance Corp., a state agency set up to aid the city which borrows on behalf of the city.

State officials have said the money will come from various state funds to keep the city from defaulting until Dec. 11 — enough time for Congress and President Ford to agree on some form of measure to keep the city from default, according to Carey.

Carey has been pressing for quick action in the Legislature on the tax package as it is seen as the key to obtaining federal aid or loan guarantees for the city.

New York City sources said the tax package included:

—A graduated increase in New York City residents' income tax to produce $75 million.

—A 50 per cent surcharge on the state's estate tax, for $35 million.

—A bank tax increase that would yield $30 million.

—A minimum charge for personal and corporate income to raise $15 million.

—A $10 increase in the $15 auto use tax, to yield $15 million.

—Raising the tax on low-tar cigarettes from four cents to eight cents a pack to bring in $15 million. The tax on high-tar cigarettes is already eight cents.

—Extension of the city's four per cent sales tax to barber shops and beauty and massage parlors, raising $15 million.

U.S. waterways seen in mortal danger

New York Times Service

CHICAGO — Asserting that America's rivers and lakes were "in mortal danger," Assistant Secretary of the Interior Nathaniel Reed said Friday the federal government should impose a near-total ban on the toxic group of chemicals known as PCBs. He excepted only those destined for use in transformers and capacitors.

Even the use of PCBs in such equipment — regarded as relatively safe by the manufacturers but not by environmental scientists — must be "immediately and critically reviewed," Reed said, adding that all substitutes be evaluated so that PCBs can be completely eliminated from industrial use.

Reed delivered his speech on the third and final day of a conference on polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, and it was by far the strongest statement against their continued use by a major government official.

PCBs have been used in manufacturing processes since 1930 but they were not detected as ubiquitous toxic elements in the environment until 1966. For many years, they were confused with DDT, with which they have a similar chemical structure.

Reed said he was "deeply shocked by the pervasiveness of PCBs; they are literally everywhere." He said he was "very troubled by the exceedingly high levels found in fish from all our drainage systems." He emphasized he did not mean just the Hudson River and the Great Lakes, — which have serious and widely publicized PCB problems — but countless waterways in all parts of the country.

He said that PCBs posed an immediate threat to efforts to preserve and protect endangered species of fish and mammals. "Under present conditions," he warned, "PCBs may very well pull the rug out from beneath us by destroying marginal species in spite of our best efforts for preservation."

Reed said the Environmental Protection Agency, which sponsored the conference, had the responsibility for limiting or banning PCBs in the environment.

EPA Administrator Russell Train, who opened the meeting on Wednesday, said he thought the way to control PCBs was for Congress to quickly enact a toxic substance control act which has been pending for several years. Train also said he was reluctant to order any individual industries from dumping PCBs into the environment by using Section 504 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Amendments Act of 1972 because "there is a question as to whether it would hold up in court."

PCBs have caused liver cancer and reproductive failures in laboratory animals and some of the General Electric workers using the chemicals in New York State have complained of allergic dermatitis, nausea, dizziness, eye and nasal irritation, asthmatic bronchitis and fungus infections.

60 vehicles pile up in fog

Combined News Services

TAMPA, Fla. — About 60 vehicles piled up along a 20-mile, fog-shrouded stretch of Interstate 4 when visibility dropped to zero during the Friday morning rush hour. The fiery crash hospitalized eight and closed the superhighway for 2½ hours. Nearly two years ago, a 55-car pileup in the same general area, also in thick fog, claimed one life. "I'll never forget that noise as long as I live," said Mary Stephenson, a nursing student, as wreckers pried apart the mangled steel. "We heard everything screeching, and it just went on and on."

Viet MIA talks

WASHINGTON — Members of the House special committee on missing in action will confer Monday in Paris with representatives of the two Vietnamese governments, Chairman G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss., said Friday. Montgomery described the meetings as informal, unofficial and preliminary. He said in a statement he hopes the meeting "will lead to official talks between our select committee and the top officials of North and South Vietnam in the future."

HEW chiefs resign

WASHINGTON — Two more top welfare administrators in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare have submitted their resignations, it was learned Friday. The resignations of John Svahn and John Young in HEW's Social and Rehabilitation Service represent almost the last of the Nixon administration carryovers in the department. Earlier this fall, U.S. Welfare Commissioner Robert Carlsson and his deputy also resigned from HEW.

Fierce new battle in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Fierce street fighting with rockets and heavy machine guns exploded Friday night across most of Beirut, pushing Lebanon toward another round of bloody civil war. Clashes between Moslem and Christian gunmen were the most intense since a battle for the capital's luxury hotels three weeks ago. They left a fragile cease-fire in shambles. The fighting engulfed Beirut's eastern residential sections and also reached into the Martyrs Square commercial area and close to a Palestinian refugee camp on the eastern outskirts. At least 18 persons were killed and 100 kidnapped. Tough fighting also broke out between Moslem and Christian armies in the northern city of Tripoli, scene of bloody clashes this spring.

Laos shortages

VIENTIANE, Laos — Gasoline stations shut down Friday and Vientiane residents prepared to get around on foot or bicycles following the closing of the frontier during this week's fighting between Thailand and Laos. Shortages of vegetables and other food items were also anticipated, but a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Laos had "other friends and other ways of coping with the situation." The statement apparently referred to anticipated aid from North Vietnam or possibly from the Soviet Union. Soviet aid and technical personnel have been arriving in Laos in greater numbers since the Communist-led Pathet Lao gained control of the country last May. The landlocked country has relied on Thailand for most of its petroleum products or on Thai permission for the products to pass through Thai territory.

Spaniards flock to Madrid to mourn Franco

Combined News Services

With Fascist salutes, flowers, tears and prayers, hundreds of thousands of Spaniards, including crippled war veterans, paid a wildly emotional farewell to Gen. Francisco Franco on Friday. Mourners paralyzed the streets of Madrid in the biggest outpouring in the capital in more than a quarter-century.

An elderly woman said she walked for four hours to see Franco's body "and I would have walked for four more."

But as Spaniards paid homage to Franco, who died Thursday at 82, the Caudillo's handpicked heir, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, faced growing opposition from the left, the right and dissident army officers who called his succession to power "another dictatorial act."

Franco lay in state in an open coffin, his face ravaged by a five-week fight against death. As night fell, the streets of Madrid were jammed with lines of mourners moving slowly and silently toward the National Palace, traditional residence of Spanish kings, to pay their last homage to the man who ruled them with an iron fist for 36 years.

Franco will be buried Sunday in the grandiose monument to Spain's Civil War dead built on his orders in the bleak Valley of the Fallen, 35 miles north of Madrid.

Pioneers

Four pioneers of flying, including World War I ace Frank Luke Jr., will be inducted today into the Aviation Hall of Fame in Dayton, Ohio.

Robert Campbell Reeve, president of Reeve Aleutian Airways who pioneered airline routes in South America before going to Alaska, is the only one of the four still living.

In addition to Luke, who shot down four enemy aircraft, and Reeve, the inductees are Reuben Holis Fleet, Air Mail Pilot No. 1, and Roscoe Turner, the 1930s speed flier.

The four join 58 others enshrined over the past 14 years, including the Wright brothers, Eddie Rickenbacker, Wiley Post, Amelia Earhart and Charles Lindbergh.

Retrial

Former Florida Sen. Edward Gurney will be tried again on charges of lying to a grand jury and conspiring to extort money from contractors, a Justice Department spokesman said Friday in Washington.

A jury deadlocked on the two criminal charges after a six-month trial last August in Florida. Gurney was acquitted of five other charges.

Gurney, a Republican, chose not to seek re-election after being indicted in 1974.

Civil rights activist Dick Gregory called on Friday for a demonstration at the White House on Thanksgiving Day in support of a new investigation into the slaying of Martin Luther King Jr.

Loan

A British philanthropist and the Israeli government have loaned Valery and Galina Panov $85,000 so the former Soviet ballet stars can buy a penthouse in Jerusalem.

The Panovs, who came to Israel from Russia last year and have been performing here and abroad, needed an apartment big enough for a ballet studio but couldn't afford to buy one in Jerusalem, said a spokesman for Mayor Teddy Kollek in Jerusalem.

George White, a British ballet lover who helped get the Panovs out of the Soviet Union, made a loan of $60,000 and Israel's Ministry of Immigrant Absorption put up the balance "with the same kind of loan we give for an immigrant starting a business," the spokesman said.

Register protest

My motorcycle and truck have been at the lowest vehicle registration rate — $12 and $45, respectively, — for years. Under the new staggered, year-round renewal system, my motorcycle's registration is good for eight months and my truck for 16 months. The fee on my motorcycle should be two-thirds of $12, which is $8, but it's $9. For my truck, the fee should be $60, but it's $61, and I'd like to know why. If the California Department of Motor Vehicles has added $1 to each registration fee, that's quite a windfall for the state. W.D., Los Alamitos.

The renewal charge has from two to four parts, depending on the type of vehicle — an $11 annual registration charge, a license fee that is based on the value of the vehicle, a weight fee on trucks, and an environmental fee if the vehicle has a vanity license plate. Each of these fees goes to a different government agency: the first to DMV, the second to county property tax funds, the third to the state department of transportation for highway construction and the fourth to an environmental fund. Consequently, for bookkeeping purposes, the DMV had to compute each separately instead of simply prorating the total fees on a monthly basis. Because the $11 registration fee can't be evenly divided by 12, DMV officials decided to set the fees for each period of time: and they are as follows: seven months, $7; eight months, $8; nine months, $9; 10 months, $10; 11 months, $11; 12 months, $11; 13 months, $12; 14 months, $13; 15 months, $14; 16 months, $15; 17 months, $16; and 18 months, $17. The other fees are prorated on a 12-month basis and then added to the base registration fee. In most cases, the fees work out to $1 more than they would if the total charges were prorated.

King Family

Some friends told me that the King Family, which was such a success on television, is coming to the Long Beach Arena. I called the arena, but the person I talked to didn't have any information on this show. Can Action Line find out if the King Family will be performing in Long Beach, and if so, how I can get tickets? M.N., Long Beach.

The 30-member King Family will perform at the Elks Club Charity Ball Dec. 13 at the Long Beach Arena, 300 E. Ocean Blvd. Tickets, which cost $1 each, can be obtained at the Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St., Long Beach, Calif. 90815. If you order by mail, you should include a self-addressed, stamped envelope and address your ticket request to the attention of Gertie Howard. Starting this week, tickets also are on sale at the arena box office. The dance will be held from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., but the doors will open at 6 p.m. Proceeds will be used for cerebral palsy research and other Elks Club charity projects. The King Family show is built around the famous King Sisters, who sang with Horace Heidt's band in the 1940s. They retired in 1950, but in 1965, the sisters along with their husbands, children and grandchildren debuted as the King Family and had their own weekly television show for several seasons. One of the sisters is married to orchestra leader Alvin Roy and his band will provide music for dancing at the Elks Club ball.

Tax loss?

We lost our money in the San Antonio Shores land scheme in Baja California and would like to write off the loss on our income tax return, but no one at the Internal Revenue Service will tell us if we can. A.M., Carson.

An IRS spokesman said there is no definitive ruling on a situation such as yours. Section 165 of the Internal Revenue Service Code states that a loss is one that was incurred in a trade or business, in any transaction entered into for profit or in any casualty situation, which includes money or property that is stolen or damaged by fire or natural disasters. To deduct your investment, the loss has to fall under one of these three categories and whether or not it does is a subjective judgment that might vary with different IRS auditors. If you could prove that you invested in San Antonio Shores strictly to make a profit, the loss might be deemed deductible under the second category. If you could substantiate that you were swindled out of your money, you might be allowed to declare the loss under the casualty provision. In the case of San Antonio Shores, the developers apparently didn't own the land and, in any event, under Mexican law, the property couldn't be sold to U.S. citizens. The California attorney general filed a lawsuit charging the developers of San Antonio Shores with fraudulent business practices and a default judgment was issued against the defendants, but whether this would make your investment a casualty loss is unclear. The IRS spokesman said the only advice he could offer is for you to seek professional tax counseling before you file your return. He conceded that IRS offices are supposed to provide free information on which items are deductible, but said they aren't able to give definitive answers in all cases. If you declare the loss and the IRS subsequently denies the deduction, you can appeal such a decision and present any information to substantiate your position.

Boy sends 44c to 'save' Queen

It may not be much compared to the millions invested in the ship, but young Tony Dale of Bonita explained in a letter to the Long Beach City Council he wants to start a Save the Queen Mary Fund and "all I have is 44 cents right now."

Tony apparently had read incorrect reports that the city was going to scrap the Queen Mary, so he wrote to Mayor Thomas J. Clark, and the 44 cents in coins were taped to the letter.

"Please read this with concern, because I love that nice old ship," he wrote.

He said he is starting his fund in Bonita, a community near San Diego.

"On all the money," he wrote, "it says, 'In God We Trust.' Well, I trust all of you up there. I want you to put my money to the Queen Mary and not to some phoney fund."

"P.S. Don't keep the money for yourself. Think of me and that beautiful (sic) old ship, the Queen Mary, and right me back please."

Mayor Clark promised he would "right" Tony back and tell him the city isn't going to scrap the Queen Mary.

Suspect in LBSU campus rape cases under arrest

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

A man suspected of the attempted rape of a Long Beach State University coed in the campus library was arrested Friday by campus police as he allegedly tried to meet her a second time.

Long Beach police later booked Alfred James Penneck, 41, of 9145 Buttercup Ave., Fountain Valley, on suspicion of assault with attempt to commit rape, in connection with the incident Wednesday evening on the LBSU library's fifth floor.

HE WAS also booked on suspicion of raping an LBSU student near the pay parking lot across Seventh Street from the campus Oct. 17.

Campus Police Chief Jack Brick said he was distressed that three persons apparently witnessed the Wednesday night assault and failed to intervene or summon officers.

University President Stephen Horn called the witnesses' indifference "a shocking example of citizen irresponsibility."

"We will make every effort to maintain a secure campus, but we must have the active support of everyone to make that a reality," he said.

Horn termed the assault "outrageous" and said he is stepping up an antirape program that has been in effect on campus for more than a year and increasing police patrol.

THE ARREST of Penneck at Sambo's Restaurant, just off the campus at 1760 Bellflower Blvd., was made by campus police under Brick's direction. Campus police have jurisdiction for one mile outside the university, officers said.

Brick said he and two other officers, wearing old clothes, nabbed Penneck as he approached a look-alike stand-in for the victim. The decoy was a secretary in the campus police office, he said.

Penneck didn't resist arrest, Brick said.

He said the rape attempt occurred Wednesday about 7:30 p.m. when the victim, a 19-year-old student, was sitting at a desk among the stacks in a corner of the library. The assailant "grabbed her from behind, gagged her and bound her hands," Brick said.

The man apparently carried no weapon, but the student was so frightened she didn't resist, he said.

AFTER fending the coed, the assailant demanded she meet him Friday at 11:30 a.m. at Sambo's, and she nodded to acknowledge the demand, Brick said. Brick said the victim told him that three other persons witnessed the incident but did nothing.

The coed told police she freed herself, then boarded an elevator to leave the library. She said she was horrified when the assailant got on the same elevator at the third floor and began to molest her again, Brick said. However, he added, the man

When the elevator arrived at the first floor, the man followed the coed out of the library, but she ran to a classroom where her boyfriend was taking a night class, Brick said. He took her home and then drove her to the campus police station to report the incident.

Brick said Orange County law enforcement agencies were asked to watch the victim's home because the assailant had noted her name, address and phone number from textbooks she had with her in the library.

A SKETCH of the man was drawn by a Los Alamitos police artist and used in Penneck's arrest when he arrived at Sambo's, Brick said.

Brick said the rape in the parking lot across the street from the college occurred Oct. 17 at 7:30 a.m. In that incident the rapist forced the victim to accompany him to a ravine behind the lot.

Examiner hurt in driving test

An examiner for the Department of Motor Vehicles was hurt Friday when a car driven by an applicant for a driver's license collided with an oncoming bus, Long Beach police said.

In critical condition in Pacific Hospital's intensive care unit Friday night was Vincent W. Jones, 62, of 5856 Pavo St. He suffered lacerations and head injuries.

The driver, Diane Lynn Davidson, 23, of 500 Ximeno Ave., suffered only minor injuries.

Officers said she was driving north on Magnolia Avenue during her license test at 10:50 a.m. when a southbound Long Beach Public Transportation Co. bus turned left in front of her car at Burnett Street, officers said.

No one on the bus was seriously injured, and no one was cited or held, pending results of an investigation, police said.

Body found; beating cited

A Compton man was found beaten to death at his home Friday, police said.

Officers identified the victim as Douglas Stitt, 57, of 470 W. Alburtils St., a city building inspector.

His widow and stepdaughter discovered the body in bed about 3:45 a.m.

UFW WORKERS protesting "firings for union activity" vow to continue their occupation of Gov. Brown's office "until something is done." —AP Wirephoto

UFW to continue sit-in

SACRAMENTO (AP) — United Farm Worker supporters pledged Friday to remain in Gov. Brown's office until he acts on their complaints stemming from the state's new farm labor election law.

That promise came after about 60 workers talked with the Democratic governor for two hours in his reception room in a meeting that ended at 2:30 a.m. Friday. The sit-in began Thursday.

Regents oppose Isla Vista plan

IRVINE (AP) — University of California regents Friday approved a resolution opposing incorporation of the community of Isla Vista adjacent to the UC Santa Barbara campus.

Several regents, including industrialist Norton Simon, spoke against the resolution, arguing that the university shouldn't take a stand on the proposed incorporation of the area where rioting erupted in 1968.

Gov. Mervyn Dymally urged that the Isla Vista question be studied further but his motion was defeated and the regents went on record as opposing the incorporation.

The proposed incorporation is currently before the Santa Barbara County Local Agency Formation Commission, and approval by the panel would place the matter before the voters.

The regents also approved a long range development plan for the Santa Barbara campus that would cut projected student enrollment in the 1981-82 school year by 40 per cent. An environmental impact report submitted with the UCSB development plan also was approved.

UC President David S. Saxon said the university is making efforts to alleviate operating losses suffered by UC medical facilities in Sacramento and Orange Counties and said county and university officials are meeting on the problem.

Saxon said the University has no plans to close any of its medical facilities. Saxon also delivered the president's report, noting that the nine-campus system is now receiving almost $300 million in federal funds, a sum which he said represented more than 6 per cent of national federal funding at the university level in 1974.

Saxon quoted a National Science Foundation report showing that the UCLA and UC San Diego campuses were among the top five colleges in the nation in terms of federal support.

Medi-Cal bills in some cases if they earned a certain amount of money.

Periuss held in his ruling that a person either is or is not a Medi-Cal recipient. He ordered the reimbursement to any recipient who had paid a share of his or her medical bills during that time period.

Nance said the state was mailing letters to the most recent addresses of all recipients affected by the ruling. The case stemmed from a suit against the Reagan administration, Nance said.

last few weeks doesn't have "time."

She said the UFW sit-in was intended to get state action on grower firings and other unfair labor practice complaints.

Questioned about UFW complaints, state Agricultural Labor Relations Board spokesmen have said they are handling the complaints from the UFW and rival Teamsters Union as fast as they can.

But Mrs. Huerta was firm. "We will be here every day until something happens," she said.

Around Mrs. Huerta, 40 workers were sitting in the room. Children played on the floor. Men with big sombreros sat in chairs against the wall. One woman wore a shawl with the UFW black eagle on it.

Brown's press secretary, Bill Stall, said the administration had obtained a list of the ranches where the UFW said the firings occurred and it was looking into the matter.

Asked if Brown would allow the demonstrators to remain in his reception area, Stall added that issue was being discussed.

The protesting workers were from San Diego County. Some said they had worked on one ranch for over 10 years before they were fired for union activity.

Earlier this week, Chavez said a survey of 11 UFW offices showed 1,165 workers had been fired for union activity in September and October.

Meanwhile, the latest Associated Press tally shows the UFW with 165 election wins covering 18,600 workers. The Teamsters have 98 wins covering 10,500 workers. At 19 ranches, a majority of workers voted for no union, and 47 elections remain undecided due to challenges.

Man who shot deputy guilty of manslaughter

SALINAS (AP) — A jury convicted Zane Caldwell of voluntary manslaughter Friday in the fatal shooting of a Yuba County sheriff's deputy last year.

Caldwell, 20, sat impassively as the panel of four women and eight men returned its verdict. The jurors had deliberated four days.

The judge recessed the jury until Dec. 1 when the second phase of the trial will start. It will determine whether Caldwell was legally insane at the time of the murder.

"I think it's the right decision. It fits the facts," said defense attorney Thomas Matthews.

The district attorney, who had sought a first-degree murder conviction, refused comment.

Caldwell pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity to killing Yuba County Deputy Sheriff Donald Brown, 38. Brown was gunned down at a cabin in rural Camptonville in November 1974 when he tried to arrest Caldwell for allegedly threatening to shoot passersby.

Over welfare rules compliance

Plumas County vs. state

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state of California is preparing to haul tiny Plumas County into court because it refused to comply with welfare rules, a deputy state attorney general said Friday.

The mountainous county, population 14,000, and the state, population 21 million, had been at odds earlier this year over welfare requirements, but a truce had been negotiated.

Now, a dispute over retroactive payments has the state preparing a request that the county be held in contempt of court, Deputy Atty. Gen. John Fourt said.

Fourt said the state can't afford to allow Plumas County to do its own thing because federal funding could be jeopardized if all counties don't play by the rules. "The state will pursue diligently against recalcitrant counties to see that they do comply," he commented.

Marion Woods, state Department of Benefit Payments director, had given the county until 5 p.m. Thursday to change its mind and agree to make an undetermined amount of back payments that might be owed welfare recipients.

"We responded that we are not going to comply," said Baird McKnight, county counsel, carrying out the wishes of the County Board of Supervisors.

"I think the main issue is they are telling us to spend money that we did not budget for and do not care to spend," McKnight said.

He said estimates of cost to the county are "nebulous" but he said the bill could be from $10,000 to $20,000.

Fourt disagreed, saying Plumas County has had only one claimant under the retroactive payments program.

And Fourt added that of a $10,000-$20,000 total cost, the county would pay only 16 and two-thirds of administrative costs and 25 per cent of the actual benefits. The federal government pays 50 per cent, the state 25 per cent.

Fourt said he was preparing papers to be filed next week in Sacramento County Superior Court.

The earlier dispute was settled when county officials met with Gov. Brown, and got his approval to help develop pilot welfare programs tailored for smaller counties.

The latest dispute stems from a Superior Court ruling July 28 that every county welfare department in the state research all cases back to 1971 and pay certain additional benefits.

They include $60 a month to each pregnant mother on welfare during that time and more money for those who shared their homes with old-age recipients.

Medi-Cal recipients to get refund notices

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state began mailing notices out this week to about 60,000 Medi-Cal recipients who stand to receive a total reimbursement of up to $2 million following a court ruling.

Bob Nance, spokesman for the Department of Health, said in an interview Friday that a ruling by Sacramento Superior Court Judge Irving Periuss prompted the state's action.

From Sept. 1, 1971, to Feb. 1, 1973, the state had in effect a rule that required Medi-Cal recipients to pay a portion of their

Fromme not sure she'll take stand

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lynette Fromme refused Friday to say whether she would testify in her own defense, and her attorney said that if she declined he would rest his case immediately.

Attorney John Virga said outside the court that Miss Fromme told him "if she cannot have the Manson family here, she doesn't want to testify."

Miss Fromme, a follower of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, is charged with attempting to kill President Ford. She has repeatedly demanded that Manson be allowed to participate in her trial.

"The 27-year-old defendant who has boycotted proceedings since Nov. 7, was brought into court late in the day after telling Virga she did not want to testify."

VIRGA asked U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride to make his own inquiry of the red-haired defendant.

"If she does not testify then I'm going to rest," Virga said.

Miss Fromme, clad in a powder blue pants suit, stood before the judge as he asked: "Do you wish to testify?"

"Your honor," she said, "I can't answer that question right now."

"This is an on-going trial," the judge said. "We have a jury waiting."

Miss Fromme replied: "I'll answer it on Monday."

MacBride recessed court until Monday morning to give her time to make her decision. If she still refuses to take the stand, it appeared likely the trial would near its end with the resting of the defense case.

If she chooses to testify, proceedings could go on for two or three more days.

If convicted, she faces a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

At Friday's session Miss Fromme remained absent from the courtroom while the jury was present. Virga called only six witnesses in his effort to prove that the Manson family follower never intended to kill Ford when she allegedly pointed a gun at him in a park near the Capitol on Sept. 5.

His first witness was a young auto mechanic,

Peter Perry. He said that during a 1973 outing at a firing range, the tiny red-haired defendant skillfully loaded and fired a .22-caliber pistol similar to the .45 caliber pistol Secret Service agents say they took from her.

Prosecutors have sought to show that Miss Fromme didn't shoot Ford when she pointed the gun at him because she didn't know how to advance the bullet into the firing chamber. But Perry said that during two days of shooting, Miss Fromme accurately loaded a clip, advanced the bullet and fired.

THE defense contends Miss Fromme went to the Capitol Park where Ford was to appear, not intending to shoot him, but merely aiming to gain publicity for Manson and his jailed followers. She had said they deserve a new trial.

Virga called a controversial witness — college student James Damir — and told jurors for the first time of his disputed version of Miss Fromme's words as she was being wrestled to the ground.

Damir confirmed he told police she had shouted, "It's not loaded anyway. It's not loaded anyway."

However, when further questioned, he said he no longer remembers Miss Fromme saying those words and instead thinks she said, "It didn't go off anyway. What are you worried about?"

VIRGA, who had described Damir as a crucial witness, exclaimed, "As you sit there, you are saying you didn't hear Lynette Fromme say, 'It's not loaded anyway' over and over?"

"I don't recall her saying that, yes," Damir replied.

Asked why he repeated those words to police, he said, "I've thought about it a lot and I can't explain it."

Virga has said the government sought to suppress that testimony because it would indicate Miss Fromme knew there was no bullet in the gun's chamber when she aimed it at Ford.

It was alleged concealment of Damir's statements that led to Virga's unsuccessful motion to dismiss charges against Miss Fromme.

Woman lawyer request denied

Associated Press

Emily Harris lost another bid Friday for appointment of a woman cocounsel, but Ruth Astle, the lawyer in question, said she would remain without pay as part of the defense.

Mrs. Harris and her husband, William, are charged with robbery, assault and kidnapping in an alleged Symbionese Liberation Army crime spree in May 1974. Patricia Hearst, also indicted with the Harris, is awaiting trial on a bank robbery charge in Northern California.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler turned down a defense request to appoint Mrs. Astle on grounds that she lacked experience in criminal cases. Mrs. Astle, 28, of

San Francisco, was admitted to the bar last March 5.

Brandler's ruling means that Mrs. Astle will not be paid out of public funds, but can remain without pay.

Mrs. Harris has made several attempts since she was brought here last September to have a woman cocounsel appointed, arguing that only a woman can adequately represent her feminist point of view.

The Harris have declared themselves unable to pay for legal counsel. Leonard Weinglass was appointed to represent Mrs. Harris and Deputy Public Defender Ed Rucker was named to represent Harris.

Cleaver put into custody of state

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The United States Friday technically turned over custody of Eldridge Cleaver to the state of California, but his release from a federal prison was up in the air.

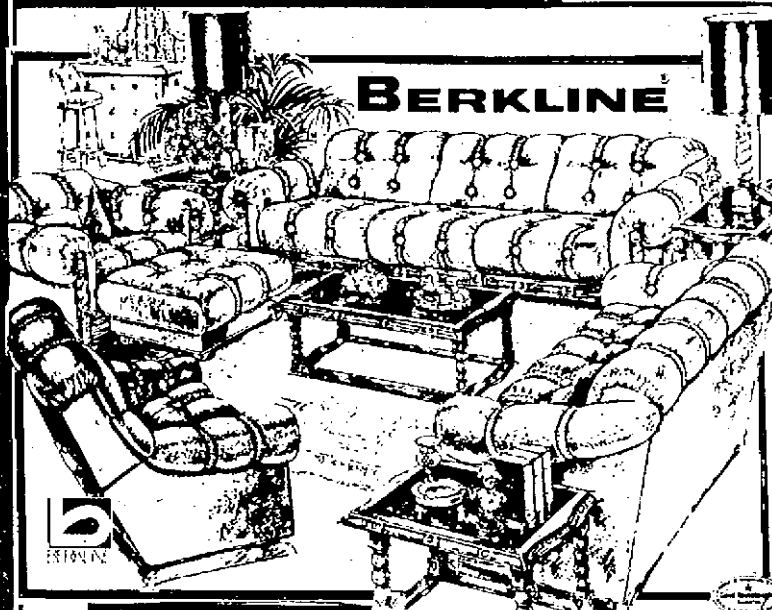

The only federal charge against the former revolutionary, unlawful flight to avoid prosecution, was dismissed in San Francisco by U.S. Magistrate Owen Woodruff.

Cleaver will remain in the Metropolitan Correctional Facility in San Diego. "When the state comes for him, he'll be here," said Williams amid indications his celebrated prisoner may be around for days.

CLEAVER, 39, ended seven years of self-imposed exile and was flown from Paris early this week. He is expected to face three counts each of assault and attempted murder stemming from a 1968 shootout between Black Panthers and Oakland police.

Refugee children 'excel in math, eager about system'

FT. INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa. (AP) — School ended Friday for Indochina refugee children here, with state educators grading them excellent in math, confused by science and eager to learn the American system.

Classes covering kindergarten through 12th grade have been conducted since September at the refugee center.

THE CLASSES ended because the center is due to close at the end of this month. There were 2,036 Vietnamese and Cambodian children when the program started and 676 on the final day. The center here has processed 20,000 refugees since late May.

"They were exceptional in math," said Ken

Adams, a basic education associate in the state Department of Education, which conducted the program. "Our senior students were in calculus."

"They did fairly well in science, but to many this was something they were not exposed to in any great quantity."

Adams said some of the long, tongue-twisting words on plant life were difficult to explain. Science was not emphasized in the refugees' native school systems, he added.

Other subjects taught were English, writing, social studies, physical education, music and art.

Most students were from middle class families and had been educated in private schools, Adams said. The majority attended class for just over two weeks, although some stayed four weeks.

"IN SOCIAL studies we tried to give them a comparison from their type of culture to the culture they'll be exposed to," Adams said.

"We told them we are made up of many different nationalities and have certain traditions. They knew nothing about Halloween and Veterans Day. We now have Santa Claus visiting and that's new to many of them."

The refugees also had trouble understanding this country's concept of family life. In Southeast Asia, the immediate family means parents, grandparents, nephews, cousins, aunts and uncles.

Unified Vietnam balloting agreed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — North and South Vietnam announced Friday they will move soon to form a single government for the divided country — a step widely expected since the Communist victory last April over the former American-backed Saigon government.

Radio broadcasts from Saigon and Hanoi monitored in Bangkok said a political conference of the two Vietnams decided to hold elections soon leading to a unified government "based on independence and socialism."

Communist leaders of North Vietnam, whose forces plus the Viet Cong drove out the U.S.-supported regime in the South, were expected to dominate the unified state.

National Assembly for the whole country."

"The number of deputies to the National Assembly will be made proportional to the population," the broadcast declared, and "there will be a deputy for about every 100,000 inhabitants."

IT IS estimated that North Vietnam has a population of 23.8 million and South Vietnam 20.6 million.

Hanoi said the National Assembly "will define the political system of the state, elect leading state organs and work out a new constitution of the unified Vietnam."

A consultative conference between 25-member delegations from North and South Vietnam opened last Saturday in Saigon and agreed on "national reunification in all aspects," the broadcasts said.

upon the time of election, number of representatives, nature of the National Assembly, and the first session of the National Assembly."

The broadcast gave no details, but presumed adopted were proposals for a secret ballot, a minimum voting age of 18 and a 25-year age requirement for candidates.

Among issues reported left for the National Assembly to decide were the name of the unified state, the national flag and what city would be the national capital.

Despite their standing policy of eventual reunification, both North and South Vietnam applied last summer for separate United Nations membership. Their applications were vetoed by the United States first in August and again in October in retaliation for exclusion of South Korea from the world organization.

THE RULERS of a single Vietnam face many practical problems of merger, presumably the reason that unification has been delayed so far.

North Vietnam has had a Communist form of government for many years, while the South was ruled until April by a series of anti-Communist regimes. Saigon, a city swollen by refugees during years of conflict, is undergoing major changes instituted by the new rulers, as are lesser urban areas and rural districts in the South. Occasional clashes with die-hard troops still are reported, though a stagnant economy, not armed warfare, has become a major problem for the new Communist regime.

Ruling may hamper crime reporting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The news media are prohibited from reporting confessions and such things as criminal records and some statements by prosecutors in advance of criminal trials, Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun said Friday.

Blackmun acted on an order by a county judge in Nebraska restricting news coverage of a mass murder case. As an order by a single justice, his action is confined to the Nebraska case and does not establish binding precedent.

In Omaha, Neb., G. Woodson Howe, a vice president of the Omaha World-Herald and spokesman for a group that challenged the county judge's ruling, said an appeal to the full court was being filed immediately.

Besides seeking to vacate those portions of Blackmun's ruling that went against the news organizations, the appeal asks that the full court stay the orders of the county judge immediately.

There are no regular sessions of the Supreme Court until Dec. 1 and no regular conferences of the justices until Dec. 5.

Blackmun set aside a ban by the county judge on reporting medical testimony in open court. Such testimony, as well as details about crimes and identities of victims disclosed at open preliminary hearings "in themselves do not implicate a particular defendant," he said.

But Blackmun left undisturbed a ban on reporting confessions and circumstances of the defendant's arrest. He said a court could order the media not to report such items, as well as a defendant's criminal record and some statements by prosecutors against the defendant's interest.

It would be up to the defense and the prosecution, if it wished to join the argument, to prove that reporting such things would "irreparably impair" the ability of jurors to reach independent and impartial judgments, he said.

"I conclude that certain facts that strongly implicate an accused may be restrained from publication by the media prior to his trial," Blackmun said.

He also invalidated the judge's adoption of a set of voluntary guidelines for trial coverage that had been worked out by Nebraska newsmen and lawyers.

The guidelines, drafted some time ago and used before in Nebraska as a guide to trial coverage in general, describe as generally appropriate for media reporting:

—Identities of the defendant and the victim, along with biographical information about them.

—Circumstances of the arrest.

—Evidence against the defendant "if, in view of the time and other circumstances, such disclosure and reporting are not likely to interfere with a fair trial."

The guidelines describe as generally inappropriate for media reporting:

—Confessions or other statements of the accused unless they have been made "to representatives of the press or to the public."

—Opinions about guilt or innocence, predictions about the outcome of a trial, results of examinations and tests, statements about anticipated testimony and in-court statements made with the jury absent "which, if reported, would likely interfere with a fair trial."

The guidelines also say that reporting an accused person's prior criminal record "should be considered very carefully" and "should generally be avoided."

While the reporters and lawyers who drew up the guidelines intended them to be voluntary, the county judge made them mandatory in the mass murder case by making them a part of his order.

In setting them aside, Blackmun said: "I find them on the whole... sufficiently riddled with vague and indefinite admonitions

... that I have concluded that the best and momentary course is to stay their mandatory and wholesale imposition in the present context."

"The state courts, nonetheless, are free forthwith to reimpose particular provisions included in the guidelines so long as they are deemed pertinent to the facts of this particular case and so long as they are adequately specific and in keeping with the remainder of this order."

Blackmun did not distinguish between confessions made to officials and confessions made to the media or to the public. He barred the reporting of all confessions, saying: "A prospective juror who has read or heard of the confession in statements repeatedly in the news may well be unable to form an independent judgment as to the guilt or innocence from the evidence adduced at trial."

The restrictive order was issued Oct. 27 by Lincoln County, Neb., District Judge Hugh Stuart. It bars reporting of specified information concerning the case of Erwin Charles Simants, who is charged with slaying six members of a Sutherland, Neb., family.

Blackmun held that the voluntary guidelines could not hold up as a court order because they were "riddled with vague and indefinite admonitions" such as that publication of a defendant's criminal record should be considered "very carefully."

Schemes proliferating

Ailing economy prompts boom in mail order fraud

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press

The ailing economy has prompted a boom in mail order fraud, according to the government, which says swindlers are taking advantage of concern about money to lure consumers with promises of something for nothing.

Frauds range from fake correspondence schools offering little more than a fancy diploma to contests where the "winner" winds up paying more for his prize than he would if he went out and bought the item in the first place.

The Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration says there has been a recent increase in bogus schemes that prey on people of low income, with little schooling, desperately trying to improve their economic status.

TO HELP consumers,

the Postal Service has published a booklet called "Mail Fraud Laws," available free by writing Consumer Information, Dept. 54, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet details the most common frauds and points out that an 1872 law provides fines of up to $1,000 and prison sentences up to five years for anyone using the mails to further an illegal scheme.

Here are some of the frauds to look out for:

—Chain-referral selling: Consumers are offered the opportunity to buy an expensive product like a television set and are told they can easily earn back the price in commissions by getting their friends to make similar purchases. The product costs more through the mail than it does in retail stores and the buyer rarely earns more than one or two commissions.

—Fake contests: "Congratulations! You've just won a sewing machine. Come to our offices and select the cabinet you want." Watch out! You'll probably wind up paying more for the cabinet than the combined unit is worth.

—Debt consolidation: Beware of solicitors who tell you to turn over all your payment books and debt records and pay them a specified sum each week. For the first few weeks, your checks will be used to pay off the consolidator's fee rather than your original creditors and you may not find out until the merchant threatens to repossess your property.

Orders up in durable products

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported Friday that business orders for durable goods rebounded in October, providing evidence that industry is providing the economy with the spending boost analysts say is necessary to sustain the recovery.

Durable goods are those with a life expectancy of three years or longer and include production equipment and facilities as well as such consumer items as automobiles.

The Commerce Department said the volume of new orders in October was up by 1.3 per cent to a total of $42.8 billion. The volume of orders had slipped in September for the first time in six months, dropping 1.1 per cent.

Herman I. Leibling, the Treasury Department's top staff economist, said the latest increase was a solid sign of continued economic growth.

Leibling said the drop in the volatile defense goods industry of $303 million could be discounted in attempting to assess the underlying strength of business spending.

And factoring out the defense fluctuations, spending by business on capital goods showed an increase of 3.5 per cent.

"This supports the notion we're on the road" to continued economic growth, Leibling said.

The recovery so far has been fueled primarily by increased consumer spending, triggered by the tax relief and rebates of last June.

The figures showed that the only other industrial sector showing a lower level of orders during October was the transportation equipment industry.

The Ascension. In bits and pieces.

With the Ascension of Christ, the final prophecy was fulfilled. Now, that religious moment has been captured in a magnificent mosaic which contains 3 million pieces of Venetian glass. It adorns the entrance to the mausoleum and gardens in Forest Lawn.

Some people think it's unusual to find great artwork existing side by side with a mortuary and a mausoleum. We agree. It is unusual. But it's the very essence of Forest Lawn. We invite you to view our art. And our unsurpassed facilities for above ground burial. We think you'll agree that our new mausoleum is every bit as impressive as the great works of religious art that grace the grounds here at Forest Lawn.

Sightings of missiles unsubstantiated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration denied Friday that any missiles had been fired in an area where an Eastern Airlines pilot reported seeing what looked like missiles pass his plane Wednesday.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman also said his agency had found no evidence of missile firings, and said there was a possibility the pilot had seen flaming meteorites. The spokesman said meteorite showers were common in the area this time of year.

The Eastern pilot, Capt. C. S. Wilson of Hollywood,

Fla., said he told the FAA he saw unidentified objects pass near his plane while flying about 60 miles south of Richmond, Va., Wednesday.

"I saw what I first thought to be a formation of three or four aircraft above us ... As I looked closer all I could see were short vapor trails," Wilson said in a statement released from Eastern's Miami headquarters.

"I have never seen a salvo of missiles in flight, but by the pictures I've seen, this is what missiles would look like to me," he added.

Wilson said he saw the objects for only five or six seconds and called to the copilot to look. But "before he could pick up my line of vision whatever it had completely vanished," he said.

The Eastern plane was on a flight from West Palm Beach, Fla., to Washington at the time of the sighting. It was descending from 24,000 feet to 15,000 feet in preparation for a landing at Washington's National Airport.

Wilson said the weather was clear at his altitude, and visibility was unlimited. He said the unidentified object passed 2,000 feet above his plane and about five miles away, traveling from east to west.

There are several military bases in the area south of Richmond, and missile-carrying jets often fly in the restricted military airspace near the commercial airways. Those military planes in the past have sometimes strayed out of their restricted zone and into commercial airways.

There also is a NASA base in the area that often launches missiles for atmospheric research.

A Defense Department spokesman said an exhaustive search of all military branches had found that no missile-carrying planes were in the area of the reported sighting on Wednesday afternoon. The spokesman also said no land-based missiles had been fired.

A NASA spokesman said missiles were fired Wednesday but no launches were made anywhere near the time of the reported sighting.

The Defense Department spokesman said his department was continuing to look into the reported sighting.

The reported sighting was relayed by the Eastern pilot to the FAA air traffic control center at Leesburg, Va., Wednesday. The FAA immediately began an investigation. It completed a computer study of the plane's position earlier Friday and turned over all of its information to the Defense Department.

Bikini in thesis a way to bomb out

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) — Kathryn King may have to rewrite her entire master's thesis on celestial navigation.

The controversy arose when Miss King, a 24-year-old Lamar University student, completed her thesis and included a picture of herself demonstrating a sextant.

A sextant is an instrument used by mariners and aviators to navigate. For the picture, Miss King wore a bikini.

Miss King said Graduate Dean E.E. Blackburn Jr. wants the picture removed and maybe the entire thesis rewritten. He has suggested she wear a long gown to demonstrate the sextant in a photograph, she said.

University President John Gray has supported Blackburn's opposition to the picture. But Drs. J.M. Stark and Sterling Crim, members of the thesis committee, approved Stark, who worked with Miss King on the thesis, said, "We had planned to show the use of a sextant by a photograph. I didn't anticipate any problem."

Crim said, "I see nothing wrong with it."

Miss King is to undergo an oral examination on her thesis Tuesday. Her lawyer and a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union will be present, she said.

The issue "is ridiculous," said Miss King. She said she included the picture merely to demonstrate proper use of the sextant.

Yank bears carrot to Moscow

MOUNTAIN VIEW (AP) — An American scientist headed Friday for Moscow carrying a refrigerated suitcase containing, among other things, a sliced carrot.

The carrot, single carrot cells, fish eggs and some material for a radioactive experiment will be aboard a Soviet satellite when it begins its 22-day voyage. It's all part of the joint U.S.-Soviet Biological Program — Biosputnik.

The scientist, Dr. John Tremor of the Ames Research Center here, told newsmen researchers want to study how weightless gravity conditions in space affect plant growth. He said preliminary evidence shows weightless-ness speeds up such growth.

Tremor said in Moscow he will join a scientist from the Johnson Space Center, who is bringing the fish eggs.

No exact date has been set for the launching, but it is expected to come in the next couple of weeks.

Tremor said all the articles are readily available in the Soviet Union, but that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's contributions symbolize the cooperative nature of the project.

He said if not for the Soviet flight, American scientists would have to wait for the U.S. space shuttles in the 1980s to continue studying weightlessness and growth.

Seven other experiments involving bone and tissue from rats and fruit flies will be placed aboard the Kosmos satellite by Soviet scientists, Tremor said. After recovery of the spacecraft, all the data will be brought to the United States for analysis, he said.

Phaseout of foreign arms aid protested

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department protested Friday against a Senate proposal to phase out U.S. foreign military assistance grants within two years.

The phaseout, along with additional curbs on foreign military sales, was introduced by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., as a substitute for the administration's foreign military aid bill.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON
Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Opens a half-year of magnificently optimistic experiment, then a half-year of examining the outcome and adapting to a different, more spiritual life-style. Your public image changes greatly, depending upon how you cope with circumstances. All relationships are tested so you know for sure where you stand. Today's natives are visionary, yet practical, precise and logical.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Play your usual role in community customs. Stay away from gossip-provoking situations, and don't comment on others' personal activities. An opportunity for a significant move comes late today.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): The solution for some longstanding problem is near. Assistance from the outside isn't likely, although you receive encouragement. Do the best you can with loved ones.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Using your head now saves much stress and struggle in the future. Leave commercial considerations for another time. Concentrate on improving personal and public relationships.

Cancer (June 21-July 21): Stick with your recent habits and avoid extra spending. Accept attractive invitations from others, but don't take the initiative yourself. Favorable impressions are bound to be quite expensive.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 22): Established patterns are jolted a bit. Be willing to change plans, improvise and help your own people cope with upsetting circumstances. Sentimental ventures are bound to be quite expensive.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strive for peace through mixed influences and potential conflicts between others who try to get you to take sides. Tonight you receive good news and inspiration.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Depend upon yourself and your own resources rather than the opinions and guidance friends offer. Others question the feasibility of the plans. Explain your ideas sensibly.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Mental pursuits are favored over physical exercises. Work at educational activities, sell ideas and play intellectual games. Conservative approaches to annoyances succeed with patience.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Older people and traditional issues take precedence and must be dealt with before you tend to your concerns. All parties are free to change for the better. Then it's your turn.

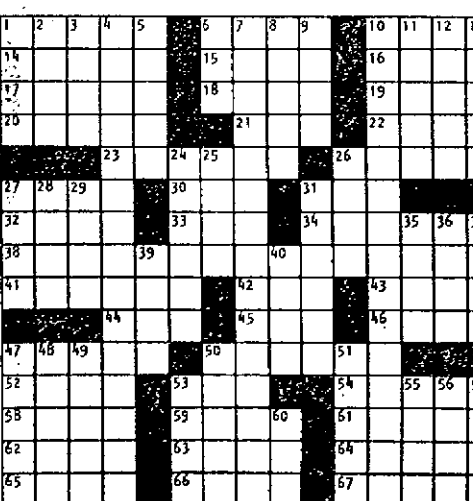

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): After a low point in your cycle of persuasive ability, there's no way but up this Sunday. Be receptive to new ideas and add them to your plans once you understand them fully. Check details.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can find something bright and interesting in the most humdrum habits and familiar people if you'll only look with an open mind. In later hours, you glow with enthusiasm. Share the mood.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Use your mind rather than your muscles today. You can plead your case well with important people. Good advice is available for the listening. Keep later hours open for fun.

Catholic antiabortion plan draws opposition

WASHINGTON Star
WASHINGTON — Even before the Roman Catholic Bishops of the United States passed their resolution Thursday announcing they will wage an all-out political campaign to obtain a right-to-life amendment to the Constitution, Jewish, Protestant and secular organizations charged that such antiabortion activity is in violation of the separation of church and state.

By unanimous voice vote the bishops approved the extensive antiabortion fight in what has been their most politically oriented annual conference ever. They said that they would keep the fight going as long as they need to — "10 years, if necessary."

BY INFERENCE they also vowed to press more vigorously their fight for aid to parochial schools. In addition, in the final day of the conference, the bishops passed strong resolutions supporting government policies providing for full employment for anyone needing a job and "a decent home for every American."

The religious coalition for abortion rights, which has 23 Protestant and Jewish denominations and agencies in its membership, said that if Catholics, through political action, are able to get such an amendment passed, then it would be an abrogation of the rights of people not having the same religious views to practice their own religions.

The coalition's vice-chairman, Richard Sternberger, said that "because a constitutional amendment prohibiting abortion would deny to other faiths their basic rights to follow their own teachings on abortion, we must view this plan...as an abrogation of our first amendment rights to practice our own religions." Sternberger is director of the Mid-Atlantic Council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Mary Jane Patterson, acting director of the Washington office of the United Presbyterian Church, said that the action by the bishops "reveals an unwillingness to heed legislative and judicial conclusions on this issue." She is secretary of the coalition.

Dr. Dudley Ward, general secretary of the 10-million-member United Methodist Church's Board of Church and Society, said, "the issue of abortion is a highly charged one on which many religious faiths disagree. We therefore, hope our Catholic brethren will consider the ramifications in the ecumenical community of enacting into law one religious viewpoint."

NEW YORK'S Terence Cardinal Cooke, the moving force behind the amendment drive, said "trying to make this a Catholic issue — that's a big hoax...that's just ridiculous. It isn't just a Catholic issue."

Cooke said, "our surveys show that the vast majority of American people are unhappy with the permissive abortion on request, and also are unhappy with the pressure that is being used, going beyond the Supreme Court decision...threatening the very rights of an individual to serve his own conscience."

The National Abortion Rights Action League charged that "the attempted imposition of Catholic beliefs upon our society is clearly a violation of this very fundamental principle of separation of church and state and leaves no room for our constitutional right to freedom of religious beliefs."

"Not only is the church hoping to impose its moral beliefs on non-Catholics, but also on the thousands of Catholics who support abortion rights," the NARA statement said.

BOTH Cooke and the bishops resolution contend that actions against permissive abortion need not be considered as strictly sectarian in nature, even though there are strong Eastern Orthodox, Evangelical Protestant, Mormon and varied Jewish convictions against abortion as well as the general Catholic opposition.

Even though the woman's lobby last year sued the U.S. Catholic Conference, which represents the country's 48.7 million Catholics, for failing to register as a lobby in violation of the Federal Lobbying Act, Cooke would not concede that the stepped-up, politically oriented campaign constitutes lobbying by the Catholic church.

Subpoenaed records in that suit showed that the bishops used $4 million in 1973 to finance antiabortion activities. It was on Jan. 22 that year that the Supreme Court ruled in favor of women determining whether to have an abortion up through the first three months of pregnancy.

THE BISHOPS did not deny using $4 million that year to fight abortion legislation and subsequently registered with congress as the National Committee for a Human Life Amendment.

None of the bishops would venture a figure on how much the conference will pump into the grassroots "citizens lobbies" called for in the resolution, but Cooke intimated that the bulk of the money would come from concerned laymen, including non-Catholics, who would keep the pressure on politicians and the courts at the local level.

Shell set to settle for $1.5 million

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shell Oil Co. said Friday it has agreed to pay $1.5 million in settlement of a suit by persons claiming that the firm's Martinez refinery damaged their nearby property.

The class action suit filed by a group of property owners in 1968 alleged that since Sept. 1, 1966, operations at the refinery had been a "source of annoyance and damage" to persons and property because of certain conditions created by the operation. These, it said, included "noise, light, vibration and the emission of liquid, gaseous and particulate matter."

Shell officials said the firm denied all charges of wrongdoing or any liability ity and stressed that the settlement shouldn't be construed as an admission of liability.

The firm said it has taken steps to abate conditions resulting in the complaint and has spent more than $10.5 million for pollution control equipment.

A legal notice published in San Francisco Bay area newspapers Friday asked potential recipients wishing to file a claim to fill out a printed form and submit it by Jan. 30.

The $1.5 million will be distributed by a formula based on whether a person owned or merely occupied the property, the period of time involved, the property's value and its proximity to the refinery.

Mideast boycott list asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Ford's attempts to lessen the impact of the Arab boycott, the chairman of a House investigations subcommittee still wants documents telling what U.S. firms complied with trade restrictions against those who did business with Israel.

The House investigations panel of the Commerce Committee recently found Commerce Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton in contempt of Congress for refusing to give up the subpoenaed papers that would identify U.S. firms which complied with Arab requests that they participate in the boycott.

"I applaud the steps taken by President Ford to minimize the impact within the United States of the Arab boycott," said subcommittee Chairman John E. Moss, D-Calif. But he said none of Ford's actions lessen the need of Congress for the boycott reports filed by American firms.

"Congress must have access to these unedited reports in order to determine whether new or amended legislation is necessary to square practices with U.S. policy declarations," said Moss in a statement.

"Congress cannot allow itself to be spoon fed the information the executive feels it should have," declared Moss.

THE President has directed Morton to amend the Export Administration Act's regulations to prohibit U.S. exporters, banks, insurers, freight forwarders and shipping companies from complying in any way with boycott requests that would discriminate against U.S. citizens or firms.

Last month, Moss asked the Justice Department to examine documents he obtained from private sources which he said appeared to be evidence of both primary and secondary boycott and possible violations of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The President said this week he had been advised by the Justice Department that refusal of an American firm to deal with another in order to comply with a restrictive trade practice by a foreign country raises serious questions under U.S. antitrust laws.

Ford said the department is currently looking for any violations.

"None of the actions taken by the President lessen the need of Congress to obtain any information it deems necessary to perform its oversight responsibilities," said Moss. "And in no way do these steps relieve Morton of the responsibility to comply with the subcommittee's subpoena."

Sharp eye on hiring overseas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department moved to carry out President Ford's orders Friday to protect Americans against discrimination because of foreign boycotts.

Labor Secretary John Dunlop issued a memorandum requiring federal contractors with overseas projects to report any attempt by foreign governments to exclude certain employees or job applicants.

Contractors now must notify the State Department if they believe an employee or potential employee is denied an entry visa because of religion or national origin.

The President announced Thursday a series of measures barring discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex or national origin — action intended to protect Jews from Arab boycott activities.

The executive order exempts contractors only when hiring persons outside the United States for work to be performed overseas.

People and ideas Our finest festival

Thanksgiving is now America's best holiday. The others have declined or have been somewhat corrupted.

Christmas, a Christian holy day, is the worst muddle of all. After all the years since it was started in the fourth century it remains a close relative of Saturnalia when the Romans celebrated the end of the year by exchanging gifts, setting their slaves free for a day and getting drunk in high patrician style.

Memorial Day, founded to honor the memory of the dead, especially those slain in battle, now features a crazy auto race.

The Glorious Fourth, now that patriotism is out of style, is a day for all Americans to acquire glorious sunburns.

Labor Day celebrates the opening of the school year.

But Thanksgiving remains very much as it was in the beginning. It is a time of feasting with family and friends. It is a religious day, but not exclusively Christian. Rather, it is a time for all people to remember their blessings. It is a national day, a time to remember our American heritage.

Happy Thanksgiving!

WHY WE SHOULD BE THANKFUL

Nations, like individuals, have their emotional ups and downs. Everyone can remember a time in his life when all seemed lost. He had no self-respect, no hope, no joy of living. He went through his days like a zombie, making the proper motions without zest. He carried an inert burden of guilt and disgust.

The United States for several years has been in such a "down" time. We all carry the scars of a lost war which should not have been fought. The highest levels of government have been dishonored by corrupt men. There are no clear voices of leadership. Intellectuals mostly devote themselves to carping, negative criticism. All institutions appear to be faltering. Only crime shows "progress."

So what is there to be thankful for? We can be thankful for what America has been and what America will be again. We should recognize that our nation is in a mood of moral despair and we should say with Lincoln, "This too shall pass."

It is a bit like "catching the second wind." A runner feels that he must collapse, that he can't take one more step. And then suddenly he is strong and

EDITOR'S NOTE: This sonnet, written long ago, is presented in the hope it may have something to say to some of the spiritually troubled young people today. According to legend, King Arthur created the Round Table, an order of knights sworn to uphold justice and peace at home and defend Britain from the barbarians. As in all things human, evil crept in. Queen Guinevere committed adultery with Arthur's best friend, Lancelot. Modred, Arthur's bastard, raised a revolution. After a hard war Arthur was defeated and slain at Land's End. Knights often rode on religious quests in search of the Holy Grail, the chalice from which their Lord drank at the Last Supper.

AFTER LAND'S END

I who saw fire dance on our gabled roofs when other men denied it, being blind, knew what would come, left that doomed town behind and fled to deserts where my horse's hoofs were cut to flints, where wells were alkali, where beast-men knew not Christ. I found my cave.

By fast and prayer I studied what to save when all my world was sick and sure to die.

The things I learned I cannot tell unto the men in streets who tap their heads and nod if anyone dares speak to them of God, but this much can I say and it is true: Some who at Land's End saw King Arthur fail fled later to the desert, kissed the Grail.

running better than before.

We can be thankful for what America has achieved in this century. Never has any people done a tenth as much in 75 years.

The physical achievements alone stagger the imagination. Here are a few:

* Two bicycle mechanics launched a motorized box-kite. As a result of that day at Kitty Hawk Americans have walked on the moon.

* The horseless carriage slowly replaced the horse, a slow, dangerous and costly mode of transportation. Like all progress, the auto has brought new problems, but it has brought freedom of movement to a nation.

* Television brings instant communication to everyone. The things that are communicated can be improved, but the machine itself is a blessing to millions.

* Power tools at all levels from vast construction projects to the home kitchen relieve workers from the more stultifying forms of toil.

One could go on and on. This list is almost endless.

But what of the human condition? Are people happier, healthier and better than they were in the year 1900?

This history of human progress is as dramatic as that of machine progress.

* Life expectancy has steadily increased. Many epidemic diseases, such as smallpox, typhoid and polio have been practically eliminated. Tuberculosis, a major cause of death then, has become increasingly rare. Modern medical achievements would have seemed miraculous to horse-and-buggy doctors.

* Education beyond elementary school was usual.

'Contagious friendliness'

Pledge record tells of loyalty

By MARK CLUTTER

"This church has done beautiful things to my own spirit," said the Condon H. Terry, pastor of the Little Brown Church (First United Presbyterian), Atlantic Avenue and Fifth Street.

"In my past career I have come in contact with many churches of all denominations," he said. "I've known some wonderful churches, but I've never known any church that is better than this."

"The people here are the warmest, kindest, most open people I have known. There is contagious friendliness. The spirit is here, the spirit of Jesus Christ. In this church one feels God's presence in a special way."

Pastor Terry, a minister for 25 years, knows more about other churches than many ministers. During his 18-year pastorate in Madison, S.D., he was active in state and national activities of the Presbyterians. He left the ministry temporarily to go into business. His new career included Mainstream, Inc., an organization which helps clergymen of all faiths who leave the ministry.

HE GAVE some almost unbelievable statistics to illustrate the spirit of the Little Brown Church:

Attendance at Sunday School and Sunday worship is 100 per cent of the membership.

Pledges are 125 per cent of the membership.

The pastor explained, "This is a small church, about 200 members. Of course, not everybody can come to church every Sunday, but nonmembers make up for them. And not everybody can make a pledge, but many non-members give to the work, bringing the pledges up to 125 per cent."

The church is working hard to build its membership. Each Sunday a team headed by Cort Johnson goes visiting in a residential area. Team members knock on doors and politely ask people to visit the Little Brown Church. The team is meeting with success.

It's dinner time each Wednesday at the church. The meal is cooked in the church kitchen. Now and then housewives contribute something extra, such as pies. Usual attendance is 70 or 80.

There is also a weekly Bible class which is methodically working through the Bible.

The church, like most downtown churches, has its share of older people. But it also has a vigorous youth program. Jack Scott serves as youth minister.

SUNDAY, DEC. 7, will be a big day at the church. It will celebrate its 70th anniversary.

"This church has a sense of history," the pastor said. "There are families of the families that founded the church. There is, however, no one who remembers 1905. Families can be a closed little clique or they can be very open and friendly. These families are open and friendly."

When the church was founded there was a population of 12,000. The city boasted of three autos but no paved streets. The first Little Brown Church was built at the present site. In 1914 a larger church was built. It survived the earthquake of 1933 but became too small. The present building was constructed in 1938. It is believed to be as earthquake-resistant as possible. The concrete is reinforced by steel beams.

The building was white, but Terry insisted when he accepted the pastorate two years ago that it be painted brown in keeping with tradition.

OUTSIDERS often wonder why there are two Presbyterian churches within two blocks of each other. The reasons can be found in local and national church history.

There were two Presbyterian denominations — the United Presbyterian Church of North America and the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. As a result, Long Beach had two First Presbyterian churches — "Old First," founded in 1888, and First.

The denominations merged to form the United Presbyterian Church.

And Long Beach "Old First" merged with Calvary to create Covenant United Presbyterian at Third Street and Atlantic Avenue.

The Little Brown Church, now belonging to the same denomination, could have easily merged too. But the people didn't want to. This was the church of their fathers and grandfathers. In this church they remembered baptisms and weddings and funerals. This was their home.

PASTOR Terry, a native of New Jersey, was a submariner in World War II. He married "the girl next door." They have eight children. He attended the university and seminary in New York. They went to South Dakota in 1951. Between 1969 and 1974 he was involved in various business activities, including real estate.

Philosophy of weddings

EDITOR'S NOTE: Recently these pages carried brief articles by several pastors on what a wedding should be. Here is another answer.

By REXFORD STYZENS
Minister
Unitarian Universalist Church

I prefer that couples contact me well in advance of their wedding date. I refuse to do weddings for couples who either expect to be married the same day they contact me or who allow insufficient time for us to counsel together and plan the wedding service. I am not reluctant to refuse to do weddings, because I know a couple can always find someone if they just want a person to read words over them.

In my church the wedding is not treated as a sacrament. The foundation of the marriage is the relationship created by the couple. By the time they come to me, that relationship already exists. The ceremony is a public celebration of the private commitments persons have made in reaching the decision to marry. It is the opportunity to tell their family and friends about that decision and their hopes for the future.

I ask all persons I marry, therefore, to choose the content of the ceremony. My job is to help them speak their feelings. The ideal ceremony is one that is wholly personal in content and created by the couple. As many persons are not skilled in such self-expression, I provide an extensive supply of sample materials to use as models.

I offer premarital counseling and in most cases it is voluntary. In certain cases I insist on counseling, as when the couple is very young. The counseling materials focus on the whole range of family life issues including financial and sexual behavior. I am doing less premarital counseling these days because of the growing practice of couples living together before marriage. That is an old custom that has been rediscovered. As one young man of Scandinavian descent told me, he was only doing what his ancestors had always done. Living together before marriage is an excellent premarital experience, and I feel less of an obligation to counsel such couples.

The style of ceremony can vary from very brief, informal, and spontaneous statements by the bride and groom and guests to a traditional and formal wedding in the Victorian style that somehow has become "standard."

As I attach no reverence to Victorian customing, the dress of bride and groom is a matter of their own choice, and I seldom interfere. I am concerned about the environment for the ceremony. Any place such as a merry-go-round or hot air balloon would prevent a public sharing of heartfelt feelings, and I would not participate in such services.

The fees I charge for non-members who come to me are based upon the time and work involved in preparing and conducting the ceremony. Few people realize how time consuming it can be. A wedding scheduled for the middle of the day prevents me from planning much of anything else for that day. Therefore, the Unitarian Universalist Ministers Association has set a minimum fee of $80 for weddings. When extensive travel is involved that also can raise the fee. Of course, there is no fee for weddings done for members of the church I serve and their families.

The climate in southern California allows persons to plan weddings for the out of doors, and I have performed weddings in parks, on the beach, and elsewhere. These have generally been lovely settings. Weddings are almost always one of the most enjoyable aspects of the ministry.

More books

Religion Editor:
I wish I would have had access to a bibliography on the Charismatic Movement similar to the one given in the religion section about a year ago, when I was writing a thesis on the subject.

For those readers who are deeply interested in the Holy Spirit and his work today, but who choose not to be identified with the current Charismatic Movement, it might be helpful to provide a list of books which give helpful information on the Holy Spirit, howbeit without the overtones of Pentecostalism (of course, many books on the list printed in the paper would be helpful to all Christians, whether they identify with the Charismatic Movement or not).

May I suggest then which I find extremely useful:

Brunner, F. Dale, A Theology of the Holy Spirit. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 1970.
Dunn, James D.G. Baptism in the Holy Spirit. London: SCM Press Ltd., 1970.

Hoekema, Anthony A. Holy Spirit Baptism. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 1972.

Klyper, Abraham. The Work of the Holy Spirit. (a classic) Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 1973.

Ramm, Bernard L. Rapping About the Spirit. Waco: Word Books, 1974.

Robinson, Wayne A. I Once Spoke in Tongues. Wheaton: Tyndale House, 1973.

Samarin, William J. Tongues of Men and Angels. New York: Macmillan, 1972.

65 victors

Religion Editor:
I'm sending you this note to thank you for the excellent exposure and publicity that you gave to our last Five-Day Plan. It had high visibility. More than one hundred registered for the Plan and more than half of this number said that they came because they saw it in the newspaper. I think that this should give you a great deal of satisfaction.

You will be glad to know that 65 gained a complete victory over tobacco and most of the others cut down considerably.

Thank you again for the coverage that you gave us.

Larry Kagels, Pastor
Long Beach Seventh-Day Adventist Church

Thanks

Religion Editor:

I want to thank you for the excellent coverage you gave to First Lutheran Church and our Vietnamese family. Although no one called about housing as a result of the article, we did get several responses regarding employment and another church furnished our family with a lovely set of dishes.

A relative of one of our members has supplied us with a house at a very minimal rent.

Thanks again for your assistance. It was appreciated very much by all of us at First Lutheran.

Review

Bible reads like a novel

THE GOOD NEWS ABOUT JESUS, edited by Frank Dell'isola, Holman, $3.95.
Here is a New Testament that can be read as one would read a fast-paced novel.

Every book lover intends some day to read the Bible thoroughly, but even devout Christians shirk the task. There are so many books, all divided into chapters and verses. The languages of some versions is antique. The Gospels and several books of the Old Testament are somewhat repetitious.

"The Good News About Jesus" solves those problems. The editor has combined and rearranged the New Testament into a single flowing narrative. The language is that of "Today's English Version," also known as "Good News for Modern Man." The prose is excellent — very modern and very clear but also dignified. There are no footnotes or other attention breakers.

This should be a good book for anyone who has not read the New Testament. It is possible that students of the Bible might also enjoy it because it does present a fresh approach.

Of course, something is always lost in editing. The four Gospels tell the same story, but each is distinct and individualistic. To combine them into one narrative loses the varying emphasis of each. After all, Matthew is a very different author from John.

One is even more doubtful about editing the Epistles. (Editor Dell'isola understood this and worked with a light hand.) Paul was a literary craftsman; his Epistles are perfect essays. The Book of Romans, for example, should be read as a whole, and it is almost impossible to delete a single sentence without harming the structure.

This book will not replace New Testaments of standard structure. Its purpose is to give an over-all view of the Christian textbook. You see the New Testament whole.

Rocky warns of extremism peril to GOP

By NEIL MEHLER
Knight News Service

WICHITA, Kan. Vice President Nelson Rockefeller flew to sunny Spain after leaving the Republican Governors meeting in Wichita Friday a message as chilling as the Kansas weather.

The message: Avoid political extremism if the GOP is to survive.

He also warned his former colleagues that federal revenue sharing has only "a 50/50 chance to pass now" in Congress and that they'd better lobby hard to keep it alive. New York City plans for restructuring its financial system hinge on more than $400 million in revenue sharing and the city's fiscal program "will be knocked into a cocked hat" if Congress lets revenue sharing die, Rockefeller said.

Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa suggested that Democrats anxious to help save New York City may be forced to vote to renew revenue sharing, though some of them would not support it if the New York factor didn't exist.

Rockefeller left for the funeral of General Franco in Air Force 2 from McConnell Air Force Base here after having made clear to the governors and newsmen that he considers Ronald Reagan a threat to the future of the GOP.

Though he did not mention Reagan by name on the second day of Reagan's fly-around to announce his challenge to President Ford for the party's 1976 nomination, Rockefeller left little doubt about his target.

He said, "No American political party can long endure by directing its appeal to a narrow minority — neglecting the opinions, the interests, and the aspirations of the vast majority of the electorate."

He condemned Reagan directly when he arrived in Wichita late Thursday by telling reporters Reagan's proposal to cut the federal budget would simply add financial burdens to state and local governments that already are in fiscal trouble.

Friday he added to his criticism, saying, "It will not serve the nation to have our major parties polarize at ideological extremes."

Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond echoed this theme. Bond, chairman of the 13 Republican governors, said, "I reject, flatly and unequivocally, the odd notion that our party can somehow grow by narrowing its focus and driving good people from its ranks."

Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire, the only governor who is openly backing Reagan over Ford, told newsmen the response to Reagan's announcement of candidacy has been encouraging and that Reagan will win the New Hampshire primary, first in the nation.

Demos see works pared, not views

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Leading Democrats said Friday they may not have to give up their social philosophies, but they might have to abandon some of their social programs.

"People don't want less government, but they want better government," party Chairman Robert Strauss told the National Democratic Issues Convention.

"THE REAL weakness of our programs has been that once enacted, we haven't evaluated and re-evaluated," Strauss said. "The good hasn't been reinforced and strengthened. The ill-conceived or outgrown hasn't been altered or abandoned."

But Strauss said "we don't quit trying" just because some Democratic programs since the New Deal haven't worked out ideally.

"If a number of social programs have failed...are we going to junk social action?" he asked. "Of course not."

Strauss said the way for Democrats to restore public confidence in the party in particular and government in general is to come up with new programs which work.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis struck the same theme. He said he was not a "crazy puritan," as some have claimed, just because he recognizes "that much of what government has tried to do over the last 15 years has failed.

"WE HAVE not forsaken government as an effective instrument for social and economic change," Dukakis said. "Quite the contrary. We believe that, properly led, government can and must play a major role in managing our economy and creating the preconditions for 'the good life' for all our citizens."

Throughout the first day of their three-day issues convention, Friday, the Democrats were told that people are waiting for bold, new leadership.

"Our people are thirsting for strong leadership," pollster Peter Hart told the National Democratic Issues Convention, "but they are doubtful that they will find any."

"Americans want change, and the Democratic Party cannot expect the voters to put Democrats back in office on the strength of a few newly warmed over 1933 programs," Hart said.

AT THE same time, Keith Haller, director of the sponsoring Democratic Forum, conceded the convention theme "Beyond the New Deal" is still more wish than fact.

"The campaign for 1976 has started pretty much the way it has in the past," Haller said at a news conference. "I would say they (candidates) are probably not at this point prepared to go much beyond the New Deal."

the city, offered to pool Long Beach's funds earmarked for the Transportation Center and "people mover," if Long Beach were given top priority in any proposed transit system.

Chapman explained that the approximately $20 million in local funds, when pooled with regional money, would generate about $100 million of combined federal and local matching funds.

The "transit summit" meeting was the second held at the instigation of Gov. Brown, who sought to get local governmental agencies to agree on a transit program so as to take advantage of an estimated $800 million or more available in federal funds over a five-year period.

"This is the first time we ever have actually had money available to do anything toward construction of a transit system," Clark said.

The first "summit" meeting was Oct. 10 in Sacramento, and the participants agreed to have the State Department of Transportation study construction costs and estimated patronage for each of the proposed segments of the system. The state report was made Friday at the closed meeting of the city and county officials.

curiosity — risking a five-year sentence with a plastic toy gun.

Reagan said it was a "realistic looking" gun resembling a snub-nose .38 caliber.

Among other points in the news conference:

He feels congressional investigations have deteriorated our capacity for counterintelligence.

The Equal Rights Amendment "risks endangering some women's rights" and specific inequalities should be remedied by statute, he said.

Asked if Ford is more vulnerable on foreign or domestic issues, Reagan said, "Let the voters decide."

He said he drew "a blank" when queried about his position on Senate Bill 1, the proposed Criminal Justice Reform Act. He pondered, trying to remember the "something that was upsetting" in the bill. "Maybe I've been in the airplane too long," he said. "It will probably come to me as soon as I leave here."

Reagan disputed that there was any extremism in his tenure as governor of California.

After his words of greeting to the welcoming group at the airport, Reagan delivered the same announcement message he has given at each of his stops.

He said he chose Washington, D.C. as the place for his announcement "because it is such an intimate part of our troubles: inflation, recession, unemployment, bureaucracy and centralized power."

While government at all levels absorbs 44 per cent of personal income, he said, "it has become more intrusive, more coercive, more meddlesome and less effective...I am convinced that under the layer of self-doubt that seems to have settled like a fog on our country, the true, strong spirit of the American people still glows, ready to be ignited so that we can once again have a sense of mission, a pride in our capacity to perform great deeds."

Reagan's day began in New Hampshire where

Thursday night he had received his biggest and warmest welcome of the two day trip. An estimated 1,000 residents of that tiny state listened to his speech and then tossed mostly friendly questions at him for 50 minutes.

For Reagan the warm New Hampshire welcome was good news. The nation's first primary is there and he may have a good chance to beat Ford in that primary.

After a morning news conference in New Hampshire Reagan flew first to Charlotte, N. C., and then to Chicago before ending his two day nationwide tour in Los Angeles.

The tour was carefully designed to cover states where Reagan hopes to beat Ford in the spring primaries. He now plans to ease off the campaign trail during the rest of November and December.

Instead Reagan will meet and be briefed by economic, military and international experts as he drafts his campaign plans for the primary battles.

Reagan will resume the campaign trail in early January, planning 15 days in New Hampshire alone.

The first two days of the campaign were a time of testing for the candidate and he seemed to gain strength and confidence as he journeyed.

U.S. sued to stop sea oil leases

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of Southern California cities and counties and the state's attorney general filed separate suits against the government Friday in an effort to block the issuance of offshore oil leases.

Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe and Curtis J. Berkland, director of the Bureau of Land Management, were named as defendants in the suits challenging the government's decision to accelerate oil and gas leasing on the Outer Continental Shelf.

The coalition suit alleged that the leasing would cause "significant environmental damages to beaches, wetlands and other sensitive shore areas," endanger wildlife and pose a threat to "largely uninhabited areas of great natural beauty."

It accused the federal government of "procedural and substantive violations of the National Environmental Policy Act."

Under the government's accelerated program, bids for the first leases — representing some 1.3 million acres off the coast of Southern California — are scheduled to be opened on Dec. 11.

'62 Scott oil fee affirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp.'s former top attorney has testified he halted in 1961 or 1962, over Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott's objections, a $25,000-a-year retainer being paid Scott's law firm.

The lawyer, Royce Savage, said in a deposition filed in U.S. District Court on Friday that he never talked to Scott again and had no knowledge of an alleged $5,000 paid the Pennsylvania Republican in the spring and fall of every year.

Savage, who as general counsel for Gulf from 1961 to 1969 had supervision over the company's lobbying activities, said he did not require an accounting of how Gulf's lobbyists spent money, however.

Another former Gulf attorney, Thomas Wright, said in a deposition filed last week that Gulf's top lobbyist, Claude Wild, had told Wright of a "practice of giving Sen. Hugh Scott $5,000 in the spring and $5,000 in the fall of each year."

Scott, who is up for reelection next year, has said, "no corporate funds were so received to my knowledge. These contributions were either committed to my own campaigns or distributed to further the campaigns of others."

It is illegal for corporations to contribute to political campaigns but it is legal for employees to give such contributions.

Savage was a U.S. district judge in Oklahoma before becoming general counsel at Gulf. Since his retirement, he has been in private practice in Tulsa.

He said in a deposition taken by Securities and Exchange Commission lawyers investigating political contributions by Gulf that the retainer arrangement with Scott's Philadelphia law firm — Obermayer, Rebmann, Maxwell & Hippell — was in existence when Savage assumed his post.

Savage said he decided to end the arrangement because "I found that this firm had done very little or performed very little legal service for Gulf."

Savage said he wrote the letter notifying the firm of the proposed termination probably in late 1961 or early 1962, which would have been after Scott had served in the Senate for three years.

The letter prompted Scott to seek an appointment with Savage in the Gulf official's Pittsburgh office, Savage said, where Scott "urged me to continue the retainer arrangement because of his association with the firm."

"It seems to me that he might have asked me to phase it out, possibly reduce it to a smaller figure," Savage testified.

Savage recalled he "may have agreed to the payment of retainer for another year at a lower figure, at which time it would be completely terminated."

Doubts bared on oil-piping studies

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Brown administration said Friday it has serious concerns about federal draft environmental impact studies for piping natural gas from Alaska and oil drilling in the Santa Barbara Channel.

The state Resources Agency, in a letter to the U.S. Department of the Interior, criticized the federal statement for not considering all alternatives to a pipeline to bring Alaskan natural gas to California.

WHILE urging delivery of North Slope gas as soon as possible, the state "finds it difficult to review major energy proposals without a federal energy program," the letter said.

The draft statement failed to consider a proposed pipeline across Alaska with a tanker route to Southern California, the state said.

The statement "contains little, if any, discussion of this major alternative proposal by El Paso Natural Gas Co., which is yet to be formally considered by the state."

Chel rips lack of FEPC aid to aged

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, labeled the state's Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC) "totally useless" following the morning session of an all-day hearing of the California Legislature's Joint Commission on Aging Friday in Long Beach.

Chel berated the commission's lack of affirmative action in helping older workers deal with problems of age discrimination in employment.

"Many older persons are virtually forced into poverty when they leave the work force," Chel said. "We must develop options for such people who have the health, ability and desire to continue working."

In the second of two meetings, (the first was held Nov. 7 in San Jose to gather testimony on problems of age and employment) Chel used the adage that "justice delayed is justice denied," citing attorney Michael Gilfix's testimony earlier that "there is a nine-month delay between the time a discrimination complaint is brought before an FEPC commissioner and the time there is action on it."

Gilfix, an attorney with the Senior Adult Legal Assistance service in Palo Alto, testified that the commission often dis-suares persons from filing complaints.

"IT'S DEPLORABLE that a person has to file an initial complaint with the commission before the courts will look at a case of age discrimination and employment. And, then there's a waiting time of nine months."

"The main problem faced by the Fair Employment Practices Commission is a backlog of complaints to be heard. We have part time commissioners trying to do a full time job," Gilfix complained. "Rather than trying to expand their staff, they're trying to cut down on the number of cases heard."

Commissioners are lay persons appointed by the governor. They are paid $50 a day for listening to complaints of discrimination. Gilfix pointed out that the appointees do not receive specialized training in dealing with the employment problems of older persons — whom the state identifies as anyone over 40.

Since its inception, the commission (which began as a part of the Rumford Fair Housing Act in 1959) has not brought a case of age discrimination to a conclusion in the courts — a fact that Chel said is "unusually hard to believe."

There is one case pending in San Diego.

Sen. Joseph Kennick, a member of the Joint Committee on Aging, charged that the commission is "not facing up to its challenges."

"THE FUNCTION of the commission was to solve the problems brought to it in a reasonable amount of time. I don't think nine months is a reasonable amount of time. A person could starve before then."

Kennick's comments drew applause from about 50 people who were gathered in the Long Beach City Council chambers for the hearing.

Kennick suggested the commission review its record to see what changes could be made, adding that it might be wise to give commissioners full time status.

Speaking for the FEPC, Marston Chavez, a senior investigator, explained the commission's primary function is to hear complaints, noting that the commission receives 30 to 45 new cases per month.

Chavez said after a complaint is brought to one of the seven commission offices throughout the state, the commissioner hearing the case can suggest three courses of action:

- Continue the case;
- Recommend a conciliation conference, or;
- Recommend the case be closed.

Chavez said "administrative difficulties" were responsible for the time delay in getting action on a complaint.

EARLIER, Chel identified four main issues that came out of the San Jose hearings. They included: the difficulty in enforcing the age discrimination provision of the Fair Employment Practices Act; business and labor's attitudes toward retirement policies; the employment opportunities for older persons through the comprehensive employment training act; and the need for the reinstatement of the older worker program in the state's employment development department.

The Long Beach hearing also entertained discussions on those issues.

The next hearing of the Joint Committee on Aging will be held Dec. 12 at the Los Angeles Convention Center.

Gave first aid to injured friend Lakewood Scout gets Medal of Merit

By VINT MADER
Staff Writer

Carl Hartman, 13, heard the branch break and saw his friend Christopher Bolt fall from the tree beside the Hartman residence at 3721 Manor Drive, Lakewood.

At first he thought the fall, occurring as Chris climbed to retrieve a ball from the roof of the house, was just another minor tumble, but then he saw blood spurting and heard his friend start to scream.

THE JAGGED end of the broken branch "had ripped the calf of his leg open to the bone," recalls Carl, who immediately put into practice the Boy Scout first aid that had, coincidentally, been taught by his father, Dr. Ronald H. Hartman.

Dr. Hartman instructs the first aid classes of his son's Lakewood Scout Troop No. 209.

Carl's lifesaving action took place on Memorial Day weekend of 1974 and it recently, after much documentation, earned the teen-ager the Scouts' national Medal of Merit.

After dispatching a younger brother, Gregg, into the house for cloths and blankets, Carl calmed Chris, folded back into place the long flap of lacerated flesh that hung from the victim's right leg and applied manual pressure to stanch the gushing blood.

Then he used the first aid materials to fashion a cloth pressure pad and, with his friend's feet elevated, applied a constriction bandage to the wound.

Continuing to reassure the victim that all was well, Carl then rushed to the telephone and called a physician friend of the family—in the process frightening his grandmother, Jean Ball, who was sitting for the boys while Dr. Hartman and his wife, Sylvia, were away.

Carl reassured his grandmother that he was not injured despite the blood on his hands.

THE DOCTOR, who rushed from his own home, took further first aid measures while awaiting an ambulance, but praised the Scout's initial steps.

The young victim was taken to Lakewood Doctors Hospital, where, as Carl recalls, the severe injury required "about 89 stitches."

Written statements from the doctor and from personnel in the hospital's emergency department praising Carl's action had to be submitted for him to receive the medal.

The awarding authority was the National Court of Honor. Carl, who also recently qualified for Eagle Scout rank, received the medal from his scoutmaster.

Panel study says Health Dept. ailing

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

Management problems and poor cost accounting methods continue to plague the massive County Health Services Department which was formed in 1972, a blue ribbon commission reported Friday.

The Public Commission on County Government—an independent body studying the county under a grant given to the Los Angeles County Bar Association—made the observation in a 111-page staff paper.

It was the third staff paper dealing with a county department. The commission plans to produce a fourth report in December on county law enforcement agencies.

AS SUCH, THE staff paper contains no recommendations, but the commission is expected to produce its final report calling for various reforms in January.

The staff report noted that the Health Services Department—a merger of the former hospitals' mental health, public health and veterinarian services—now is the largest health agency in the U.S. with a staff of 24,000 and an annual budget of $651 million.

Though the merger occurred in 1972, the report said organizational changes have not yet been completely absorbed into the department structure.

IT SAID there is evidence that the old lines of authority and responsibility (under the four separate departments) "have far from disappeared as practical influences on operations."

The report also said the merger was based on the view that the cheapest, most effective way to deliver health services is to stress uniform intake facilities through which patients are referred to specialized units.

"However, the combinations were easier described than achieved," the report said.

On the cost accounting problems, the report noted that the central payroll system automatically produces a check for each employee according to his standard work week.

THOSE WHO work overtime or who have been absent often receive more or less than they are entitled to.

The report said the problem is compounded because there is no revolving fund to compensate employees temporarily until an underpayment can be rectified.

The report also charged that the billing system for patients produces problems and said it is almost impossible to estimate how much revenue is lost because of the state of record keeping.

It said the Health Services Department estimates that it lost $1 million in outpatient revenue last year at the County-USC Medical Center because of billing problems.

Parents partly blamed in teen drinking

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Parents who encourage their teen-agers to drink in hopes they'll stay away from drugs may be helping to create a new generation of alcoholics, an alcoholism official said Wednesday.

"The strategy of these parents seems to be working," said Philip Valera, executive director of the South Bay Alcoholism Council.

"Teen-agers have been turning away from drugs and toward alcohol in the last couple of years."

As a result, alcoholism is again becoming "drug of preference" among young people, and alcohol abuse is on the increase, Valera said.

Valera said he had no statistics to back up the claim, but information from teachers and law enforcement officials shows a clear trend.

"In the last two years there's been a noticeable increase in the number of junior high school students showing up for class under the influence," he said.

Alcohol abuse by young people was one theme of an all-day conference on alcoholism that Valera's organization sponsored recently at Dominguez Hills State College.

The conference was for people in the helping professions who deal with alcoholics — school counselors, clergymen, psychologists, health educators, social workers and law enforcement personnel.

Valera said there were two types of young people who suffer from alcohol abuse — those who use it heavily and those who live in homes where parents drink.

The problems of the first group are well-known, but the difficulties of youngsters in "alcoholic environments" have been largely overlooked, Valera said.

"They are the only ones in their classes who feel they can't invite their friends home because mom or dad is regularly under the influence," he said.

"This isolates them. They tend to withdraw. Many start drinking themselves."

Such teen-agers often turn to alcohol themselves because their own needs are unmet and because their parents give them an example of how to deal with tension — by drinking.

That group of teen-agers forms "a clientele to which virtually no services are offered," Valera said.

He said the alcoholism council was working on a program for schools that would identify teen-agers in alcoholic environments and bring them together to develop friendships that would break their isolation.

"We also want to make available more information on alcoholism to be used in health classes," Valera said. "Youngsters won't feel so bad about their parents' problem if they know it's an illness."

Westminster bus plan with OC transit OKd

Trustees of the Westminster School District have given their blessing to new bus services worked out between city officials and the Orange County Transit District to alleviate school busing problems.

Officials said it will be of particular help to seventh and eighth graders, whose school busing program was canceled this year as an economy move.

The plan will go into effect next March. It provides for service at 30-minute intervals Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. by 10 minibuses and allows for students to ride OCTD routes for a fixed rate of $7.20 a month.

The new system will provide hourly service on evenings and Saturdays, and will link Golden West College, Westminster Community Hospital and the Community Services Center as well as the Westminster schools.

340 pounds of pot seized

Norwalk Sheriff's deputies Friday arrested five men and confiscated 340 pounds of marijuana at a Norwalk house.

Officers said the marijuana had a street value of $60,000 and that the arrests followed a short investigation by narcotics officers.

Booked were Michael Rivera, 28, 12126 Union St., Norwalk, Denegrio Pereda, 36, of Westminster, two Colorado residents and one man from Oregon.

Custom car show at L.B. Arena

The 16th Long Beach Custom Car, Rod and Motorcycle Show which opened a three-day run Friday will display more than 400 vehicles again to night from 6 to midnight.

The estimated value of the cars on display has been placed at more than $3 million in this, the largest show of its kind

Fire prevention program pays

The Lakewood fire prevention program has instructed some 17,000 school children and 13,000 adults in the past year.

More than that, the fire prevention lectures have drastically cut fire damage in Lakewood, according to county Fire Prevention Inspector Gordon Pearson.

"THE REASON that other cities haven't requested the program is they think it's too expensive," Pearson says, but he adds that the price, $8,500 annually, is more than paid back in the lives and fire-fighting costs saved.

Pearson's presentations can be geared to audiences ranging from preschool youngsters to adults. The program, which began in 1958, "covers everything that is known about fire," he explained.

Included are such subjects as the chemistry of fire, fire causes and personal safety.

DURING THE past year he brought these subjects to 23 schools in four districts.

"We're not there to entertain. We're there to provide information. We offer no fairy tales because fire is real and very dangerous," Pearson said.

For the younger children, Pearson teaches the dangers of matches, fire hazards and home escape procedures.

As the audiences get older, the discussion expands to include a job description of a fireman's duties, the need to preserve watershed in wildlife areas from fire, extension cord dangers, and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Older school audiences are taught fire dangers in the home and electrical appliance safety and are offered career guidance if they are interested in becoming firefighters.

The fire education program has special courses for the handicapped.

John Wayne. First, last and always, he's a personality. John Wayne might well be the last of a dying breed—a movie star whose mythical screen personality and real-life profile are one and the same.

He's a creation of his own imagination and talent—a full-fledged Western folk hero as valid as the authentic folk heroes he's played on screen (heroes like Davy Crockett, John Chisum, Gen. William P. Sherman and the cantankerous Rooster Cogburn).

John Wayne is very much the name by which his friends and associates call him—"Duke."

MOVIEGOERS who fancy themselves aficionados of fine acting have habitually preferred others over the Duke. From the Thirties to the Seventies, from the purity of Spencer Tracy to the itchy, pretentious mumbles of Marlon Brando, Wayne has always been overlooked (or relegated to secondary positions) in critical analyses.

Wayne stumbled into acting in the typical fashion of an unclaimed hero, about as naturally as his screen characters have stumbled into their story-line situations.

DURING the late Twenties while attending the University of Southern California (where he was a football star), Wayne worked occasionally at Fox as a prop boy for a young director named John Ford. Football subsequently was abandoned for an unexpected movie career in quickie B westerns (probably not unlike the B

Even when an early film like "Stagecoach" (1939) established him as an actor of considerable strength, Wayne's critics ridiculed his instinctive rather than cerebral acting method. What they've failed to note, however, is that Wayne has never had to force emotion or intellect into a role. He's never had to use outward mannerisms or gimmicks to convey inward feelings. With Wayne, it's always been the other way around: His outer force is very much inwardly inspired.

EVERYTHING surfaces naturally with John Wayne; he's an actor of pure intuition.

The acting techniques of which Wayne has been "accused" of using—his cook, stolid appearance; his deadpan reactions; the small, unobtrusive gestures made by a large, obtrusive body—are really his priceless commodities. They're his trademark as a personality. They belong to John Wayne and to no one else.

Critic Richard Schickel once referred to Wayne as "the unclaimed hero." Schickel said it all. Wayne stumbled into acting in the typical fashion of an unclaimed hero, about as naturally as his screen characters have stumbled into their story-line situations.

DURING the late Twenties while attending the University of Southern California (where he was a football star), Wayne worked occasionally at Fox as a prop boy for a young director named John Ford. DUKE WAYNE westerners spoofed in the current "Hearts of the West").

Wayne's first two films, "Salute" and "Men Without Women," both made in 1929, happened to be John Ford's second and third films, respectively. Their careers took off at the same time and crossed the same paths many times. It's difficult to separate one man from the other, they're an integral part of each other and each other's career.

And it's noteworthy, I think, that some of "Pappy" Ford's best screen work starred John Wayne: "Stagecoach" (1939), "The Long Voyage Home" (1940), "Fort Apache" (1948), "Yellow Ribbon" (1949), "Rio Grande" (1950), "The Quiet Man" (1952), "Hondo" (1953), "The Searchers" (1956), "The Horse Soldiers" (1959), "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" (1961), "How the West Was Won—Civil War" (1963) and "Donovan's Reef" (1963).

Since 1929, John Wayne has acted in, produced or directed some 250 movies, the latest of which is Stuart Millar's "Rooster Cogburn," co-starring Katharine Hepburn and currently in theaters across the country. That's a lot of celluloid—and Wayne has bright, clever things to say about each and every frame. The unclaimed hero can speak for himself. Here's what he says about favorite films:

"I NEVER think about being remembered for one particular movie or one particular role. But if I had to narrow it down to one film, I'd probably say 'the next one.' 'The movies that really mean a lot to me, however, are quite easy to single out. 'The Alamo,' for example, involved a lot of my time and money—and a lot of love. 'Stagecoach' brought me a lot of recognition at a time when I needed it, and 'Red River' is special because I was constantly being reminded during production that it couldn't have been made without me.

Business held barred from media by fairness doctrine

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — American businesses, besieged by an increasingly hostile press, are being denied access to broadcast media by the fairness doctrine, according to the chairman of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Neal O'Connor said American business is having trouble getting its messages to the public because of the fairness doctrine which requires broadcasters to give equal time to differing opinions.

"Now, on the surface, that sounds fair, indeed," O'Connor said of the fairness doctrine. "The trouble is that the station must provide that time for the opposition on a no-cost basis."

"Given the fact that the people who run the stations and the networks have a reasonable interest in selling time rather than giving it away, it is no wonder most refuse to open themselves up to the possibility of what has come to be called counter-advertising."

O'Connor made his remarks Friday at a meeting of the Syracuse Press Club.

"Everyday business has had to look to paid advertising in order to present its side of the issue and to make its point to the public," he said.

Today's 'Big Games' were never bigger

Ohio St. by 7 Cal tabbed by 2 Oklahoma by 4

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — One more factor has entered the scene for today's Ohio State-Michigan football clash, and it may make Woody Hayes and Bo Schembechler wish the season had started a week earlier.

Despite nearly a month of Indian summer weather, winter edged into the Ann Arbor area Friday, and weathermen say either rain or snow could fall during the game.

"I'd like a fast track but we'll play whatever the weather is," said Schembechler. The winner of the game will get a shot at the national championship and will represent the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl.

The loser will head for the Orange Bowl in Miami. According to the oddsmakers, the loser will be Michigan. The Bucks are favored by seven points.

Ohio State has won the right to travel for the roses in the past three years and this is the first season Big Ten teams have been allowed to compete in a bowl other than the Rose Bowl.

"I feel good about this game," Schembechler said. "I've been through enough of these games that I think I know what it's going to take" to win.

The game follows a week filled with controversy, something which has become almost as traditional as the season-ending clash.

First, there were stories that Hayes and Schembechler—a former Hayes assistant—were just short of mortal enemies. Both men denied there was animosity.

STANFORD (AP) — The annual California-Stanford football battle, known as "The Big Game," has never been bigger.

"It's the first time since 1937 in which both teams still have a chance to go to the Rose Bowl," Cal coach Mike White said, citing the fact which tells the story of today's game which will be played before a sellout crowd of 86,000 at Stanford Stadium.

California ranks as a two-point favorite.

Cal's Bears carry a No. 13 national ranking into the game and have the leading offensive unit in major college football, featuring quarterback Joe Roth, running back Chuck Muncie and wide receivers Steve Rivera and Wes Walker.

Stanford has a five-game winning streak, an offense averaging 30 points a game and last year's Big Game hero, placekicker Mike Langford.

"After that game I was totally incoherent," Langford recalls of the game at Berkeley which Stanford won 22-20 on his last-second field goal from 50 yards.

"I'm curious to see what will happen when I go out for my first kick this time. The entire Cal team knows I'm the one who made the field goal last year," he added.

Quarterback Guy Benjamin, reserve quarterback most of last season as well as this season, passed the Cardinals into position for the field goal attempt. Benjamin won't have to come off the bench today. He took over from Mike Cordova as the starter last week and passed for 243 yards in a 33-30 victory over Oregon.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — It will be like a high-stakes poker game today when Nebraska and Oklahoma collide in the Big Eight's version of the Super Bowl.

The prize for the winner is a trip to the Orange Bowl to test the runnerup of the Big Ten.

For Nebraska, it's a go-for-broke situation. The second-ranked Huskers rejected a Fiesta Bowl invitation in order, as coach Tom Osborne phrased it, "to put all our eggs in one basket."

Both teams had been banking on a Sugar Bowl berth opposite Alabama if they lost today but that spot went to twice-beaten Penn State.

Oklahoma, the defending national champion, is 9-1 and shooting for a share of the Big Eight title with the Huskers, 10-0.

The Sooners, unable to go to a bowl for two years because of probation, have agreed to play in the Fiesta if they are defeated by the Huskers.

The Sooners, who won 28 successive games before a 23-3 upset by Kansas, have been installed as a four-point favorite by oddsmakers.

That's despite the fact that Nebraska has outscored its opponents 343-85, while Oklahoma "only" holds a 295-138 scoring edge over its foes.

Both teams have outstanding defenses and Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer predicts scoring will be in the "moderate range." But he adds he didn't think Missouri would score four touchdowns last week in the Sooners' 28-27 victory.

Foothill edges Wilson

By KEN PIVERNETZ

Wilson High's first venture into the CIF playoffs in six years nearly produced a big upset Friday night.

Empire League champion Foothill, outplayed the first half, pushed across two fourth-quarter touchdowns to nip the Bruins, 23-17, before an estimated turnout of 6,000 at Tustin High.

The first-round 4-A contest was only 43 seconds away from being decided by the California tie-breaker when Steve Speicher scored on a draw play from six yards out.

Foothill had driven 68 yards in the final 2:55 to set up the deciding points.

It wouldn't be an exaggeration to say the Bruins were "Speicher'd" on the winning drive.

Twins Greg and Steve Speicher accounted for all but three yards on the nine-play march.

Greg, a 170-pound tailback and the leading rusher in Orange County this year, contributed a twisting run of 17 yards to the Bruin 38. Two plays later brother Steve, the fullback, caught a pass coming out of the backfield

LBSU TARGET: TAKE AWAY THE BIG PLAY

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — San Diego State's "big play offense" so impressed a Long Beach State scout recently that he told 49er coach Wayne Howard:

"Whenever San Diego State gets inside the opponent's 15-yard line it should take two 15-yard penalties so it will have room to operate."

It is the feeling among many coaches that San Diego State's strength—the long pass—may also be its weakness.

Long Beach State will find out tonight at 7:30 when the 49ers and Aztecs conclude their season before an anticipated 45,000 San Diego Stadium on-lookers.

"It is kind of a theory of ours," Howard admits, "that the key to beating San Diego is to keep them from hitting a 'big one.' They have such deep patterns that when they get close to the end zone they run out of operating room."

So why don't they just run the football?

"It's not that simple," Howard counters. "A team that passes exceptionally well, and works on it all the time, isn't going to be as good running the football."

San Jose demonstrated that clearly last week, surrendering 278 middle-of-the-field passing yards but restricting the Aztecs to four yards rushing in a 31-7 triumph.

The 49ers hope to achieve similar success.

"We're going to try to stop the run with five guys, three interior linemen and our two linebackers," Howard boldly states.

That tactic doesn't surprise San Diego's Claude Gilbert.

"We'll have to run the football much better this week or we'll be in trouble," says Gilbert. "Long Beach has a fine defense, especially against the pass. We'll have to take some pressure off our quarterback by running the football."

Gilbert's quarterback is Craig Penrose, the No. 1 passer in the nation.

A senior, Penrose has completed 175 of 305 passes for 2,409 yards and 15 touchdowns. The Aztecs rank No. 1 in passing in the country, averaging 60 yards a game more than their nearest rival, California.

"Penrose is a great passer if he has time to throw," says Howard. "We've got to put some pressure on him."

That could prove a problem.

The 49ers are playing the contest without starting tackles Jeff Lyall and Rich Valenzuela.

Two other linemen — Kevin Russell and Ron Kipp — have sore knees and a third, Fred Bryant, has yet to recover from a foot injury.

'No way' Rams will let Knox go to Jets

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

If Chuck Knox leaves to coach the New York Jets, it will be over the Rams' "dead body."

Ram general manager Don Klosterman, no doubt fearing a disastrous "lame duck" situation as experienced by John McKay at USC, flatly denied any foundation to reports Friday that Knox would quit the Rams after this season to return to the Jets, where he was an assistant coach for four years, 1963-66.

The Jets fired head coach Charlie Winner this week.

The New York Post quoted an "anonymous friend" of Knox as saying, "It's not a good situation for him in L.A. Under Carroll Rosenbloom, you're a loser unless you win the Super Bowl. . . . The Jets are the team he'd really like to coach."

Knox was reluctant to offer even a no-comment but later in the day as the rumors snowballed he said, "I don't want to go anywhere. Carroll has been great to me. I think I have a good situation here. I'm not interested in pursuing anything else."

Rosenbloom is in Daniel Freeman Hospital in Inglewood recovering from coronary bypass surgery Monday. He will watch Sunday's game via closed-circuit TV.

Klosterman said he had talked Friday to Al Ward, the Jets' general manager, who "called to apologize. He wanted me to know he hadn't talked to Chuck. He told me, 'I know Chuck is happy in the situation he has with the Rams.'"

National Football League teams are subject to severe disciplinary action if they approach personnel under contract to other clubs.

"There's no way we would ever let Chuck go," Klosterman said, "and he doesn't want to go."

"If he did leave, it would be over Carroll Rosenbloom's dead body and over my dead body. There's no possibility of it happening."

Freeman comes off bench to spark Laker victory

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Everyone raves—and rightfully so—about the Lakers' acquisition of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. But one of the best deals they ever made was acquiring veteran guard Don Freeman.

The 31-year-old eight-year veteran of the American Basketball Association continued to be a pillar of strength for the Lakers Friday night, coming off the bench to provide the firepower and the defense to lift the Lakers to a 118-104 victory over Milwaukee.

A Forum crowd of 15,412, second largest of the season, watched as the smooth, quick Freeman scored 16 points in the final period to team with Lucius Allen and Abdul-Jabbar in sparking the Lakers to their eighth consecutive home victory.

The win, their sixth in the last seven games, elevated the Lakers into a virtual first-place tie with Golden State in the Pacific Division. It's been a long time since the Lakers enjoyed that lofty position.

Freeman's contribution cannot be minimized. A starter early in the year when Gail Goodrich was a holdout, he has easily moved into a reserve role without complaining and has still maintained a 16-plus scoring average.

He came off the bench two nights ago to score 21 points in a win over Houston.

Freeman, once an ABA All-Star, played out his option with San Antonio and was contacted by Lakers assistant coach Larry Cregar, who along with Bill Sharman coached him four years ago at Utah.

A picture shooter, Freeman's assets go beyond offense. He is a superior defender and Sharman isn't afraid to bench Goodrich or Allen down the stretch to utilize Freeman's all-around skills.

Hargrove scores 3 touchdowns in 30-18 defeat

By GARY ELLIS
Staff Writer

The Dove signified anything but peace Friday night.

Fountain Valley's Chris Dove passed for 192 yards and scored two touchdowns to out Moore League champion Poly High from the 4-A CIF playoffs, 30-18, at Veterans Stadium before an estimated 10,000 amazed spectators.

Fountain Valley, third-place finisher in the Sunset League who had to wait 24 hours before league officials agreed on its CIF berth, passed and ran past the Poly defense.

Dove, who completed 11 of 15 attempts, was the architect of a well-mixed offensive attack. The Barons, who ran 15 more offensive plays than Poly, mixed short passes, slants, reverses and sweeps to pick up 338 total yards. Dove shared the offensive honors with junior placekicker Steve Steinke, who booted field goals of 32, 37 and 37 yards and converted three extra points.

The loss overshadowed outstanding performances by Poly's Artie Hargrove and Mike Maloney. Hargrove scored three touchdowns, on runs of 80, 7 and 6 yards, completed one of four Poly passes 16 yards and finished the evening with 183 yards rushing, more than half Poly's offensive display (252). But the Rabbits played without regular QB Donald Lonfon.

Maloney intercepted one pass on the Jackrabbit three and caused a fumble on the Poly two as well as catching a pass for 29 yards.

After two exchanges, Fountain Valley was off to the races. Sophomore Willie Gittens, making his second varsity start, scored from six yards out to climax a seven-play, 50-yard march.

Early in the second quarter Fountain Valley's Bill Gritz picked off a Alvin Eston pass to give the Barons possession on the Rabbit 11. Four plays later Dove dove over from one yard out.

But then Poly applied some pressure.

Hargrove found a huge hole over left tackle and blitzed 80 yards for a Rabbit score. James Boxold blocked the conversion attempt.

When Fountain Valley's next offensive possession was stalled at the 23, Steinkne booting a 32-yard field goal and, after holding Poly on downs, was ready to score again. The Barons drove to the Rabbit three but when Gittens was sweeping left, Maloney hijacked the ball and Salapu Leomiti recovered.

Michael Washington had a pass intercepted five plays after the fumble recovery and with two seconds remaining in the half, Steinkne kicked a 37-yard field goal to give Fountain Valley a 20-6 halftime lead.

Steinkne returned to action quickly. Nine plays following the second half kickoff, he connected from 37 yards out to up the Barons margin to 23-6.

Then Poly went wild. Utilizing reverses, razzle-dazzle and halfback passes, the Rabbits marched 59 yards in five plays with Hargrove banged over from seven yards out to narrow the gap to 23-12.

Following Maloney's ninth interception of the season, Poly traveled 88 yards in 11 plays with Hargrove busting over from six yards out and Poly was breathing down Fountain Valley's neck, 23-18.

But Dove quickly settled matters. Mixing the run, with handoffs to Mike Musso (95 yards, 14 carries), and the pass, the Barons traveled 80 yards in eight plays with Dove scoring from one yard out with 8:45 remaining.

Garden Grove

stuns Norwalk

By RICK ARTHUR

Staff Writer

Mike Gilmore scored each of his team's four touchdowns as Garden Grove High eliminated host Norwalk, 28-16, in a first-round, CIF 3-A playoff game Friday night at Excelsior.

Gilmore, a 6-2, 190-pound senior, ran for one score, returned a kickoff for another and caught two TD passes as the mainstay in a balanced Garden Grove attack that accounted for 277 offensive yards.

The most damaging of the four TDs was an 80-yard kickoff return with 1:40 remaining in the third quarter.

Gilmore fielded the ensuing kickoff at the Argonaut 20, dashed up the middle behind a solid wall of blockers, cut to the left sideline at midfield and outraced Allen to the end zone.

Gilmore, who punted, returned punts and had an interception in addition to his other duties, scored initially on a 22-yard first-quarter run, then caught TD passes of 12 and 6 yards from QB Jon Harmon in the fourth quarter to put the contest out of reach. Harmon gained 31 yards rushing and added 45 on five pass completions.

Norwalk, San Gabriel Valley League co-champion with a 7-3 record and making its first playoff appearance, was limited to 31 yards rushing—only three yards in the second half—but erupted for 204 yards passing.

Allen tossed 17 yards to Mike Davis for a first-quarter touchdown and carried one yard for a fourth-quarter score after the game had been decided. He had to cope with a ferocious rush, most of the second half, when he completed only 4 of 16 attempts.

WILSON—HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

from Paul Escalera for 19 yards before being hauled down at the 9.

After Escalera kept for three yards, S. Speicher scored his second TD of the game.

Despite the Speichers' heroics, the drive had gained momentum as the result of a controversial piling on call when it appeared Escalera had fumbled on second-and-12 at his own 30. An official ruled the ball dead, then tagged on the penalty when three Bruins were grappling for the loose football.

Wilson, which ran off nearly twice as many plays as Foothill in the first half, had enjoyed a 10-3 halftime lead on an 11-yard pass from Mike Peters to tight end John Klein and a 35-yard field goal by George Leffinger.

The TD pass came after Foothill had gotten on the scoreboard first with a field goal of its own from 33 yards out by Chris Dunk. Joe Duffy's 42-yard punt return had given the Knights excellent field position at the Wilson 35.

The Knights hardly saw the ball again for the rest of the first half. Wilson ran off a 14-play, 60-play drive—leading up to Klein's reception, and another 13-play march capped by Leffinger's field goal only 2:01 before intermission.

Excellent blocking by the Bruin offensive line repeatedly broke Kent Dyer and Alan Koo loose for four and five-yard bursts during that span.

Foothill, held to only 40 yards at half, broke away the final 24 minutes for 210 as Escalera ran the option outside 10 times for 64 yards to open the middle for the Speichers.

Foothill took only five plays to drive 70 yards with the second half kickoff and draw even at 10-10. Wilson came back with the ensuing kickoff, going 60 yards as Peters threw to Klein for 22 yards and Dyer ran 11 more to the 3 to set up Koo for a score at 4:03 of the third period.

Dyer carried the ball 27 times for 96 yards, four more than G. Speicher managed on 17 attempts.

Foothill, ranked ninth among 4-A schools, is now 8-1-

Compared to some, he was a beauty

By DICK YOUNG
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — Helping the Soviets pull their basketball upset of Notre Dame at the garden the other night was Mihail Selantev, 7-foot-1, and apparently an acromegalia case, with enlarged feet, hands and facial features.

At halftime, one of the reporters said to a local college coach, "How would you like your daughter to bring that home to dinner one night?"

"Compared to some she has been bringing home, he's a beauty," said the coach.

A star of the USSR team is Aleksandr Belov, 6-foot-4, curly blondish hair, broad shoulders, rugged off the boards. After the game, the team was taking the roomy garden elevator down to the street. John Condon, the announcer, turned to the Russian interpreter, nodded to a player, and said, "Tell him he resembles a very fine basketball player we had named Dave DeBusschere."

The man relayed the message, listened to the replay, and said, "He wants to know why it must always be that we resemble an American player. Why can't the American player resemble us?"

"Try to be nice to people," says Condon.

SONNY WERBLIN was watching the Jets take one of their earlier shellackings this season, and cringing as the tacklers poured through to sack Joe Namath.

"Winnie Hill was being beaten by some quick young kid, and there was no blocking back in there to pick him up," tells Sonny Werblin. "I had Joe's dad sitting with me, and he was shuddering with each hit. About the fifth time Joe got creamed, John Namath shouted: 'For God's sake, get Boozier in there, or get Joe out of there before he gets killed!'"

Sonny had another shortie to tell, one of those almost-changed-the-course-of-history yarns:

"My partners and I had just bought the Jets and were looking around for a coach. I had talked with Weeb (Ewbank) about the job, and he was thinking it over. He was my number one choice, but I didn't know if he would leave Baltimore, so I had to think of alternatives.

"I phoned George Halas and said I'd like to talk to one of his assistants, George Allen. Halas gave permission, so I flew to Chicago and had breakfast with Allen. We talked about the job and I said to him, 'okay, if I don't get Weeb, you're my coach.'"

THE HALL OF FAME balloting is upcoming. Frank Thomas, who had some good days with the Mets, was saying how he should get some votes for Cooperstown because he was the only man who could catch anybody's fastball barehanded. Players used to make bets on it.

Frank remembers one day, when the Mets were young and Willie Mays still was a Giant. Richie Ashburn and Thomas were taking their warmup throws on the side when Richie spotted Mays.

"Hey, Willie, you want to make an easy hundred?" said mischievous Rich.

"How's that? Play you golf?"

"No, just bet Frank he can't catch your best fastball barehanded."

"That's a bet," said Willie, who could throw flame.

Ashburn moved over and Mays stepped into his warmup spot. "You ready?" said Mays.

"Wait a minute," said Thomas. "I want you to warm up first. I don't want you to have any excuses."

So, Willie started playing catch with Thomas, both men wearing gloves. Each Mays toss grew faster and faster. "I thought, I heard him say ready," recalls Frank Thomas, so as he pumped, I dropped my glove and caught him barehanded."

"Wait a minute!" Mays shouted, according to Thomas. "I wasn't ready."

"Mays then walked over to Richie," Frank says, "and said 'Let's make that ten bucks instead of a hundred.'"

"Okay," said Ashburn, who had appointed himself Frank Thomas' agent. "Ten it is."

Mays went back, pumped, and fired with all he had — and Thomas caught him barehanded.

Feet first

Notre Dame's Don Williams is all feet as he takes header in Thursday game against touring Soviet basketball team. Williams had misfortune of running into Russia's big center, Ivan Edeshko, while chasing rebound.

—AP Wirephoto.

There is a post-script to the story. "Weeks later," says Frank Thomas, "I ran into Willie and said, hey, a guy making $125,000 should be able to pay a ten buck bet. Mays laughed and said, look at all the publicity I got you — and he never did pay me."

CARL BRAUN, one of the finest pure shooters the Knicks ever had, ran into Billy Martin the other night at Leone's, his old basketball hangout. Braun was one of those naturals who could pitch a baseball as well as he could pop a basketball, and was having trouble making up his mind in college.

"The baseball scouts began coming around during my freshman year at Colgate," Carl recalled. "During the summer, I went to one of those hotel leagues, where you got fifty bucks a game, but nobody talked about it. I pitched a game against a kid from Michigan named Robin Roberts. He threw a no-hitter."

Years later, when I was with the Knicks, Roberts asked me why I hadn't stuck with baseball. I told him just one thing turned me to basketball. With a 3-and-1 count, I could never get the curveball over."

Anyway, when I decided to try baseball first, the Yankee scout came around and offered me $4,000 to sign. The Dodger scout offered me 10 thousand. My dad told me to sign with the Yankees. He said they were a better organization and that I would do better with them over the long run. I still say to him hey, dad, you owe me six thousand dollars!"

Troy eagers in debut

USC will opens its basketball season tonight against the Australian Olympic team at 8 o'clock in the L.A. Sports Arena.

Trojan coach Bob Boyd has only one starter, forward Bob Trowbridge, and two seniors on his 12-man squad.

"With such a young and inexperienced team, we'll do a lot of experimenting in non-conference games," says Boyd. "Although our game with the Australians is not an official collegiate contest, we'll approach it as we would any early season game.

"It'll be our first opportunity to see some of our players under game conditions.

Boyd will open with Trowbridge, a senior, and junior Greg White at the forward positions, sophomore Steve Malovic at center, and sophomore Earl Evans and junior Casey Jones at the guards. "By moving Evans to guard, we're attempting to put our best five players on the court," says Boyd. "Earl will not be a pure guard, but he'll have to defend other guards and bring the ball up the floor against full-court pressure."

Mack bruises knee but may play Sunday

Ram left guard Tom Mack bruised a knee in practice but the club Friday listed him as "probable" for Sunday's game against the Chicago Bears at the Coliseum.

The injury occurred during Thursday's drill, the Rams' last heavy session of the week.

Mack, an all-pro for several seasons, is expected to be sufficiently recovered to oppose the Bears' highly touted defensive right tackle, Wally Chambers, who has spent much of the season creating havoc in opponents' back-fields. He has sacked 12 quarterbacks and tackled eight runners for losses.

Mack's backup is rookie Dennis Harrah, a first-round draft choice from the University of Miami (Fla.).

Keep the ball away from Billy White Shoes

When the Pittsburgh Steelers invaded the jammed AstroDome Monday night for a classic rematch with the Houston Oilers, it will be Terry Bradshaw vs. Dan Pastorini; Joe Green & Co. testing the efficient Oiler pass pocket; Curley Culp bumping heads with Ray Mansfield and the center of the Steelers line and Franco Harris and Don Hardeman continuing their assault on the 1,000-yard mark.

The most important battle will be fought between Bobby Walden, Pittsburgh's veteran punter, and Billy (White Shoes) Johnson, Houston's flashy kick return artist.

Billy White Shoes leads the American Football Conference with an average punt return of 18 yards, going 63, 52 and 83 yards for touchdowns. The 5-9, 170-pound whiz from Little Widener College in Pennsylvania has the runnerup spot in AFC kick returns at 28.56 yards. An 81-yard TD runback gives him four scoring kick returns, only one shy of the National Football League record and he has five games remaining to match or better it.

Walden must keep the football away from Johnson on punts. He did an excellent job in their first meeting earlier this month when Billy had only one punt return for 14 yards and the Steelers won, 24-17. Walden punted five times for a 42.7-yard average that afternoon and kicked the ball out of bounds four times—twice inside the 20, once inside the 10 and also out of his own end zone to the Oilers' 43. That earned him a game ball.

INSIDE THE NFL

Detroit's Herman Weaver tried the same tactics against Mr. White Shoes, but allowed one punt to get into Johnson territory and the result was a 52-yard runback. "I've never seen anything like him," said Weaver. "I've never tried to punt away from somebody the whole game. But you have to do something, he gets to the ball so quickly."

HOW DO YOU SPELL consistency? M-I-N-N-E-S-O-T-A. The Vikings are the NFL's lone undefeated team (9-0) and boast a 12-game winning streak. They show six NFC Central titles in seven seasons and hold a three-game lead on their seventh. Three NFC championship trophies adorn the Minnesota offices.

The Vikings are one of the league's most opportunistic teams as well with a positive total each season in the takeaway-giveaway table (interceptions-fumbles recovered vs. passes had intercepted-fumbles lost).

This year they're tied with Detroit at +9 with the Rams and Dallas next at +8. Atlanta (-15) and San Francisco (-10) occupy the cellar spots. The Vikes also rank No. 1 in sacking quarterbacks with 31. St. Louis is the runaway leader in protecting its quarterback, allowing only four sacks.

NOTES AND QUOTES: Looking for an expert on NFL defensive linemen? Contact Ray Schoenke of the Washington Redskins. The 12-year veteran has played four of the five interior line positions (all except center) and is currently camped at left guard. "I've been a starter and I've been a replacement," says Schoenke. "It's a job you have to accept. You've got to know the plays at tackle, guard and center. If you don't like it you should quit. If you don't quit, you've got to be ready for anything." Schoenke explains his fondness for football this way: "It's the pressure—and the challenge of having to go out and perform under it. Even if you fail, it's a tremendous feeling. When you win, well, there are very few moments in a man's life when everything comes together like that." Cincinnati wide receiver Isaac Curtis has an ankle sprain and the Cleveland Browns' secondary is rejoicing. The former California and San Diego State star has averaged 22.9 yards for each of his 20 receptions in five outings against the Bengals. Three times he's gone over the 100-yard mark in reception yardage...Floyd Little is the ninth runner in NFL history to gain more than 6,000 yards in the game. The guys that really want to make it are the guys who are volunteering for the school team. Most people are trying to get something out of life instead of giving. They'd better realize they had the option of not playing this game. The old American dream is gone. Everyone wants the other guy to work and then share his success. When I leave this game, nobody owes me anything. These guys worrying about pensions bug me. I'm going to be 33 years old when I retire at the end of this season and I've got 32 years of work ahead of me."

Former UCLA linebacker Fred McNeill will start for the Minnesota Vikings against San Diego Sunday, replacing the injured Ray Winston at left linebacker. One-time New York Giants defensive back Pete Athas is being given a tryout to replace injured Jeff Wright. With the Vikes...Denver placed defensive tackle Pete Duranko on irrevocable waivers Friday...Veteran Len Dawson is expected to take over for injured Mike Livingston at quarterback for Kansas City against Detroit. Dawson is getting the call over former Sun Signal caller, Tony Adams "because of Dawson's experienced background," says coach Paul Wiggins. "Detroit is a wild team and we feel that with his experience he can beat them. It really gets down to that." Cincinnati leads the NFL in Johnsons with Bob A. center, Essex in the backfield and Ken at defensive left end. Both Bob and Essex are original Bengals from the 1966 draft. Ken came a year later after being cut by Dallas. Browns coach Forrest Gregg and NFL head linesman David Hawk were captains at SMU 20 years ago. Gregg was all-Southwest Conference and Hawk became an academic all-America.

CAL

Cal, Stanford and UCLA share the Pacific-8 lead with 5-1 conference records. Since the Bruins beat both Cal and Stanford, they'll get the Rose Bowl invitation if they beat Southern California next Friday night at the Coliseum.

"I think the Big Game will be for the Rose Bowl," says Stanford linebacker John Olenchak, ready to become a red-hot Trojan fan for a week if Stanford wins today.

Cal's Roth is the most productive quarterback in college ball right now, producing eight touchdowns and 872 yards passing in the last three games. Rivera, the nation's second leading receiver, has 38 catches in the last four games, and Muncie has rushed for 1,234 yards.

"Our defense, especially, will be challenged this week," says Stanford coach Jack Christiansen.

The Cards' defensive unit, led by end Duncan McColl's 18 tackles, played its best game two weeks ago in a 13-10 victory over Southern Cal. Last week it allowed Oregon 360 yards, including 283 passing.

Middle guard Paul Von der Mehden and linebacker Phil Heck have been standouts for the Cal defense, which has played very well over the last half of the season.

Pass defense could be the key for both teams. Both Roth and Benjamin have completed well over 50 per cent of their passes and allowed very few interceptions.

Then, with help from dethroned champion Southern Cal next week, either the Cal or Stanford defensive players can start concentrating on how to stop the powerful running game of the Big Ten champion, Ohio State or Michigan, in the Rose Bowl.

OKLA.—

Although much has been made of Oklahoma's propensity for fumbling—the Sooners had nine turnovers in the loss to Kansas—Osborne isn't expecting any gifts.

"We've all heard that Oklahoma fumbles a lot, but you look at their key games, big games on their schedule like Texas, Oklahoma State and Missouri, and they didn't turn over the ball in those games. They played well against the people they had to," Osborne said.

"It'll be the best against the best," he added. "I'm not even going to predict a victory. I will predict there will be a 100 per cent effort on our part."

The Oklahoma Wishbone features halfback Joe Washington, whose 71-yard TD run and three-yard conversion plunge derailed Missouri. The Sooners, who are averaging 312 yards rushing per outing, are ably guided by senior quarterback Steve Davis. Other big threats include halfback Evis Peacock, split end Tinker Owens and speedster Horace Ivory, who is hobbled and will play behind Jim Littrell at fullback.

Behind quarterback Vince Ferragamo, the Huskers are leading the Big Eight in total offense with a per game average of 422 yards.

KNOX—

Rosenbloom's son Steve, the second-ranking Ram executive, was not disturbed by the report.

"My first reaction was, well, anytime a coach is fired, there are a lot of rumors and, second, if it's in New York you're going to have more rumors because of all the media there."

"I can say this about C.R.'s feelings on Chuck: C.R. has had a knack for picking assistant coaches who become exceptional head coaches, and Chuck is of the same nature as these other men. But he's also gone past C.R.'s expectations not only as a coach but as a person. There is not a more loyal, a better-rounded or a better human being than Chuck Knox."

After his initial 12-2 season in 1973, Knox's three-year contract was extended another three years but Steve Rosenbloom was vague on financial terms.

"C.R. has a reputation for doing what is right, and their relationship is such that money is not a factor with Chuck. Chuck is not concerned about his contract or interested in going anywhere else."

The Post's informant also said that Don Shula was "on the verge of being fired" by Rosenbloom after losing the Super Bowl to the Jets when he accepted the job with the Miami Dolphins.

"Nobody likes to lose," Steve Rosenbloom said, "and C.R. is as much a competitor as anybody. But Chuck Knox the person is not going to be a loser in C.R.'s eyes."
